INTRODUCTION.

The facts and figures presented in this report describe in detail the accomplishments of the Bureau of Labor Statistics during the two fiscal years of 1922-1923 and 1923-1924.

Perhaps at no time since its establishment in 1883 has the bureau been able to show the same progress and increased activity as for the fiscal years covered in this report. Greatly increased wage collections, more placements by the free public employment bureaus, and stricter enforcement of the labor laws characterize the accomplishments during the latest two fiscal years. These achievements have become possible through the establishment of additional district complaint offices in the cities of Oakland, Stockton and San Jose, and through the reorganization of the bureau's offices.

As the State grows it is but natural that the activities of the Bureau of Labor must increase and to carry on this work expeditiously, additional field agents are necessary, who could be assigned to the handling of complaints outside of the larger cities where the bureau has district offices. At times, the settlement and investigation of complaints, such as wage complaints, and complaints against alleged violations of the private employment agency act, the eight hour law, the child labor law, etc., are delayed because of the fact that the bureau does not have field agents enough to handle cases outside of its offices. As many of our wage complaints are settled only after a hearing where employer and employe can be present, and their testimony taken, there are also needed more district offices in the rapidly growing cities of the state in order that the benefits of the bureau's activities might be extended to employers and workers throughout California, without their having to travel long distances at great loss of time and money.

As in the past, the services of the bureau have not been confined to the collection of unpaid wages and the enforcement of the labor laws. In addition, the bureau made several special investigations, covering fraudulent trade schools, movie schools, and private employment agencies. An investigation of child labor in the fields was also begun during the period covered by this report. These investigations were undertaken in response to numerous complaints filed in the several district offices. The results of these special investigations are briefly set forth in this report.

In compliance with sections 3 and 4 of the act creating the Bureau of Labor Statistics, pertinent and timely statistical data relative to manufacturing, strikes and lockouts, union rates of wages and hours of labor, employment, and earnings of California wage earners were gathered and are incorporated in this report.

SUMMARY OF FACTS.

The following is a brief summary of some of the work of the Bureau of Labor Statistics during the two fiscal years of 1922-1923 and 1923-1924. Only the major facts presented in this report are included in this summary.

Complaints Against Labor Law Violations.

1. During the two fiscal years covered by this report, the bureau received 33,801 complaints against labor law violations, compared with 25,870 similar complaints received during the preceding two fiscal years, an increase of 7931 or 30.7 per cent (Table 2, Chart II).

2. Out of every hundred complaints received by the bureau, about 87 are complaints against nonpayment of wages (Table 3, Chart III).

3. The per cent of increase in the total wage complaints received by the bureau during the fiscal years of 1922-1923 and 1923-1924 over 1920-1921 and 1921-1922 was 29.8, while the per cent of increase in the total number of all other complaints, during the same period, was 36.9 (Table 4).

4. The number of complaints against private employment agencies during the latest biennial period was 1873, an increase of 521, or 38.5 per cent over the preceding biennial period (Table 6).

5. The increase in the number of eight hour law complaints handled by the bureau during the biennial period covered by this report, over the preceding biennial period, was 277, or 31.8 per cent.

Collection of Unpaid Wages.

1. From 1913 to 1924, the several district offices of the bureau collected nearly two and one-half million dollars ($2,469,486) in unpaid wages.

2. During the two fiscal years covered by this report, the bureau collected $858,163.85 in unpaid wages, compared with $450,164.31 collected during the preceding two fiscal years—an increase of $407,999.54, or 90.6 per cent. In other words, for every dollar in unpaid wages collected by the bureau during the preceding biennial period, approximately $1.90 was collected by the bureau during the biennial period ended June 30, 1924 (Tables 9 and 10, Charts VI and VII).

3. The average savings to the workers of the state in legal fees, as a result of the bureau's collections of unpaid wages, conservatively estimated, range from $143,000 to $215,000 annually.

Criminal Prosecutions.

During the two fiscal years ended June 30, 1924, the bureau started 294 criminal prosecutions against violations of the state labor laws. During the preceding two fiscal years the number of prosecutions was 80, showing an increase in prosecutions of 214, or 267 per cent in the latest two fiscal years (Tables 19 and 20).

The State Free Employment Bureaus.

1. The thirteen permanent and seasonal state free public employment offices filled 474,691 jobs during the two fiscal years ended June 30, 1924. This represents an increase in the total placements of 129,281, or 37.4 per cent over the preceding two fiscal years.

2. The cost of filling each job to the state was 36 cents in the two fiscal years ended June 30, 1924, compared with 54 cents per job during the preceding two fiscal years.

3. Because of their ability to secure jobs free of charge through the state free public employment bureaus, the workers of California are conservatively estimated to have saved in fees over $489,000 in the two fiscal years ended June 30, 1924. The cost to the state of running the free employment offices during the same period was $171,341.32.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics is often hampered in the administration and enforcement of the labor laws of the state, because of the absence of adequate legislation on certain subjects or because of the ambiguity of some of the existing labor statutes.

It is hoped that the following recommendations concerning required changes in the labor laws as well as needed additional statutes will receive serious and favorable consideration at the hands of the legislature.

Payment of Wages.

In order that our laws pertaining to payment of wages might be more effectively administered and enforced, these laws should be amended as follows:

1. Attaching creditors should be required to pay the employes of an attached place from date attachment is levied. The law now provides that claims for wages should have priority rights in cases of attachments, but no one is compelled to serve notice on the workers when an attachment is made and the attaching creditor often allows them to work for him without making definite arrangements for the payment of their wages.

2. Preferred labor complaints should be given a lien on funds in the hands of the sheriff in cases of attachments; so that the attaching creditors can not defeat the priority rights of the labor claimants by releasing their attachments.

3. The Small Claims Court Law, as it was passed at the 1921 legislature, provides that only cases involving not more than $50 may be tried before justices of the peace. An amendment to this law is needed to permit wage claims of $150 or less to be presented to the small claims courts. The law should be further amended so as to permit the Labor Commissioner and his deputies to appear on behalf of the plaintiffs and to present evidence. Such amendments to the law would considerably facilitate the bureau's efforts to collect wages from delinquent employers.

4. Contractors on public works occasionally discontinue building operations without paying their men for the work they had performed up to the time of the stopping of work. The building workers affected file wage complaints with the labor bureau but the bureau finds it impossible to settle these cases rapidly because of the numerous legal points involved. This situation should be remedied by amending our laws so as to permit every political subdivision to pay workers from funds available for the purpose, without waiting for the completion of the job and before starting suit against the bonding company.

5. The law should also provide for liens upon crops for work performed in connection with the harvesting of same, so as to insure the payment of wages to farm laborers now often defrauded by contractors.

6. Under the existing Wage Collection Law (Stats. 1919, Ch. 228), the bureau has been taking assignments of wage claims from workers filing complaints with the bureau against nonpayment of wages. This report shows that the bureau has now on hand in its cash trust receipts fund wage claims to the amount of over $7,000, which it is unable to distribute to the rightful wage claimants. This condition arises as a result of the inability on the part of the bureau to locate the claimants whose wages have been collected. In most cases the accumulation of this sum of undistributed wage claims is due to the failure on the part of wage claimants to notify the bureau of the change of their addresses. After a reasonable time had elapsed from the date of the collection of the undistributed wage claims collected by the bureau, the amounts involved should be turned over to the state treasury. Appropriate legislation should be passed to provide for the transfer into the state treasury of the undistributed wage claims, as well as of other such moneys. This law should, of course, also provide that the undistributed wage claims turned over to the state treasury should be subject to the call of the bureau on behalf of the wage claimants involved.

Private Employment Agencies.

Our employment agency act gives the labor commissioner authority to require reports from private fee-charging employment agencies regarding conditions of employment, but voluntary organizations which furnish employment to job seekers without charge are not required to make reports to the labor commissioner. If these organizations were required to register with the Bureau of Labor Statistics and to furnish reports as to their placement work, it would be possible for the bureau to have a better check on employment conditions throughout the state.

The license fees of private employment agencies should be increased so as to permit more frequent inspections of these businesses. At the present time, some of the private employment agencies are not visited even once a year, with the probable result that the regulations affecting these agencies are not adhered to. Adequate license fees would make possible more frequent inspections and would generally result into fuller enforcement of the provisions of the private employment agency act.

The private employment agency act now provides that: "Every person licensed to carry on the business of an employment agency shall pay the commissioner of labor a license fee of one hundred dollars in cities of the first, first and one-half and second classes, and a license fee of fifty dollars in cities of the third and fourth classes and a license fee of ten dollars in all other cities and towns." Instead of this provision, the law should be amended to provide definite license fees for cities and places having populations, according to the latest U. S. Census, under 25,000, between 25,000 and 50,000, between 50,000 and 100,000, between 100,000 and 500,000 and of 500,000 and over.

Conditions of Employment.

As the act, "To prevent misrepresentations of conditions of employment," (Stats. 1915, p. 52), now reads, it merely enjoins employers from misrepresenting conditions of employment, but it does not require that they state actual existing conditions of employment. This act should be so changed as to require employers, or their agents, to furnish to prospective employees, to be sent to other cities or states, complete information concerning sanitary and living conditions under which they will be required to work.

The Child Labor Law.

The following amendments to the child labor law would considerably enhance its value and would afford greater protection to the children of the state and would facilitate the administration and enforcement of the law.

1. Children under 12 years of age should be prohibited from participating in any performance for compensation, whether direct or indirect. The labor commissioner should be empowered to make exceptions in cases where children were needed in the presentation of a regular play or drama.

2. Children over 12 but under 16 years of age should be required to secure a permit from the Labor Commissioner in order to participate in any performance.

3. Children under 8 years of age should not be permitted to work for hire in any occupation.

4. There should be a compulsory uniform system of transfer exchanges between city and county school authorities; so that county and city supervisors of attendance will know of children moving into their respective jurisdictions.

The Eight Hour Law for Women.

Employers should be prohibited from giving home work to women if the women have already worked eight hours in his establishment. The law should be made sufficiently comprehensive to include every place of employment with the exception of the home.

Trade Schools.

To remedy the fraudulent trade school evil, a law should be passed providing for the licensing and supervising of these schools by the State Department of Education.

Underground Work.

The law now provides that eight hours shall constitute a day's work in underground workings. It is a known fact, however, that few men actually work only eight hours per day. The reason for this is that men working underground are compelled to spend a great deal of time getting to their places of work and coming back to the surface. It is not unusual for underground workers to spend two hours or more per day going to and coming from work. This is unfair to these workers; their work is extra hazardous, and their hours of labor should be reduced to the required maximum of eight per day. This law should be so amended as to provide for a "collar to collar" eight hour workday. All time which the underground workers must spend in going to, and coming from, their actual places of work, should be included in the eight hours of labor per day.

Public Works.

Our laws now prohibit the employment of aliens by any government department, which includes the prohibition of employment of aliens on public works. Still, in spite of this prohibition, we find many aliens actually employed on public works. This is so because our laws on this subject do not seem to include contractors or subcontractors who are engaged on public works and who are always inclined to hire aliens, because foreigners can be hired cheaper. The law should be so amended as to compel contractors and subcontractors to employ only American citizens on public works.

Semi-Monthly Pay Day Laws.

The semimonthly pay day law (Stats. 1919, Ch. 202) should be amended so as to provide a penalty of $50 for each failure to pay semi-monthly. A provision of this kind has been upheld as constitutional by the United States Supreme Court, and is much needed in California to insure a more strict compliance with this important law.

Loggers' Lien.

A more adequate law relating to loggers' liens and liens on lumber by workers engaged in logging and lumbering should be enacted by the legislature. The time to bring suit to foreclose such liens should be extended from twenty to thirty days.

Other Laws.

Among the other labor laws which should be amended are the elevator seat law, the drug clerk act, the election law and the act providing for one day's rest in seven.

The law (Stats., 1921, p. 106) provides that "all elevators for the carriage of passengers shall be provided with a suitable seat for the operator in charge of same." This law, however, does not provide that the seat should be so situated as to enable the operator to be seated while operating the elevator.

A recent court decision (In re Twig, 204 Pacific, p. 1082) practically vitiates the intent of the law (Stats. 1921, p. 1323) regulating the hours of employees engaged in selling, at retail, drugs and medicines, and compounding physicians' prescriptions. According to the decision referred to, drug clerks may be employed any number of hours, provided they are not employed more than nine hours in any one day in the actual compounding of prescriptions. Such interpretation of the law is inimical to the interests of public health. The interests of the public require that the hours of labor of drug clerks compounding prescriptions should be limited, in order to insure accurate and painstaking attention on the part of drug clerks when preparing medicines.

Section 1212 of the Political Code provides that employes entitled to vote may absent themselves from their places of employment for two hours on general election days and that no deductions from wages and salaries may be made for such absences. This law, however, has no teeth in it in that it does not provide for penalties upon employers who deprive their employees of opportunities to exercise their rights of citizenship. The bureau's attention has been called to cases where employers have discharged employees for absenting themselves from work for two hours on general election days. It is urgently recommended that this section of the Political Code be so amended as to prescribe a penalty for offending employers.

In passing the act providing for one day's rest in seven (Stats. 1893, p. 54), the legislature clearly intended that the workers of our state should have one day of rest in seven. However, owing to the inadequacy of the language in which this law is worded, the enforcement of this law has been made difficult. This law, therefore, should be amended so as to enable the labor commissioner to carry out its purpose.

COMPLAINTS AGAINST LABOR LAW VIOLATIONS.

With the Commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics is vested the "authority and power to enforce any and all labor laws of the State of California, the enforcement of which is not specifically vested in any other officer, board or commission" (Stats. 1915, p. 814). The laws which come most frequently to the attention of the commissioner and his deputies, that is, the laws which most frequently require the exercise of the bureau's power of enforcement are, in order of their importance, the following:

1. The laws relating to payment of wages.
2. The laws relating to the regulation of employment agencies.
3. The eight hour law for women.
4. The child labor law.
5. The laws relating to sanitation and ventilation in work-shops and factories.
6. The weekly day of rest law.

In addition to the laws just enumerated, many other miscellaneous labor laws often require the exercise of the bureau's enforcement power.

That the total number of complaints against alleged violations of labor laws received at the several district offices of the bureau has been increasing each year since 1920 will be seen from Table 1 and Chart I following. From 9198 complaints received in 1920, the number of complaints has grown to 17,021 in 1924. With the exception of the fiscal years 1917, 1918, 1919 and 1920 there has been a gradual, though not steady, increase in the number of complaints handled by the agents and deputies of the bureau.

It will be observed that in the fiscal year 1923 there was an increase of 2957 complaints, or 21.4 per cent, over the number of complaints received in the fiscal year 1922; while during the fiscal year 1924, the total number of complaints was by 241, or 1.4 per cent, greater than in 1923.

OF LABOR LAWS FILED WITH, AND INVESTIGATED BY.
THE BUREAU OF LABOR STATISTICS FROM 1913 TO 1924

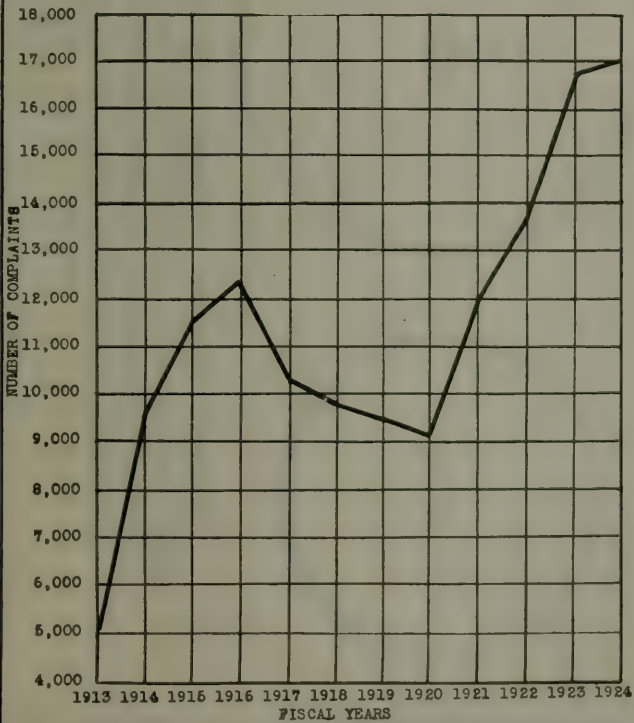

Table 2 shows the total number of complaints handled by the bureau since 1913, by biennial fiscal periods. It will be seen that during the latest biennial period of 1923-1924, the total number of complaints received was 33,801, as compared with 25,870 complaints received during the preceding biennial period of 1921-1922. This represents an increase of 7931 complaints, or 30.7 per cent, in the latest biennial period compared with the preceding two fiscal years.

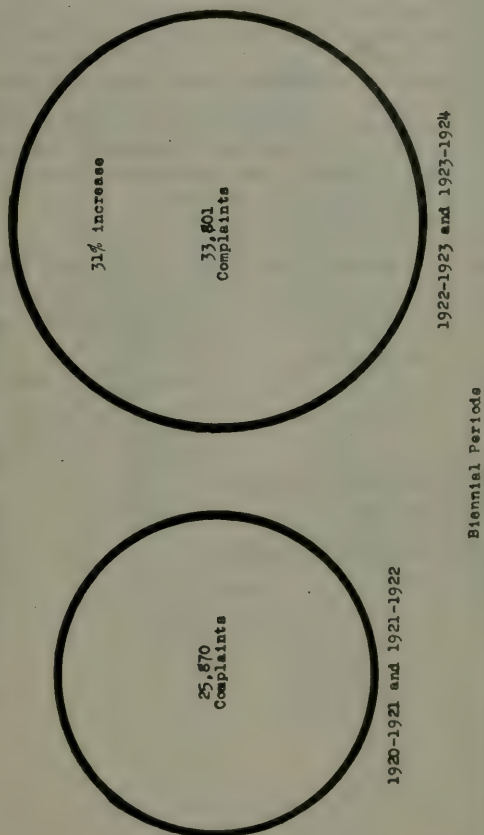

The increase in the volume of complaints received at the several district offices of the bureau during the two fiscal years of 1923-1924 is shown graphically by Chart II, following Table 2. It will be seen in the subsequent pages of this report that the largest increase in the bureau's activities is reflected in the number of wage complaints received and in the amount of unpaid wages collected.

Distribution of Complaints.

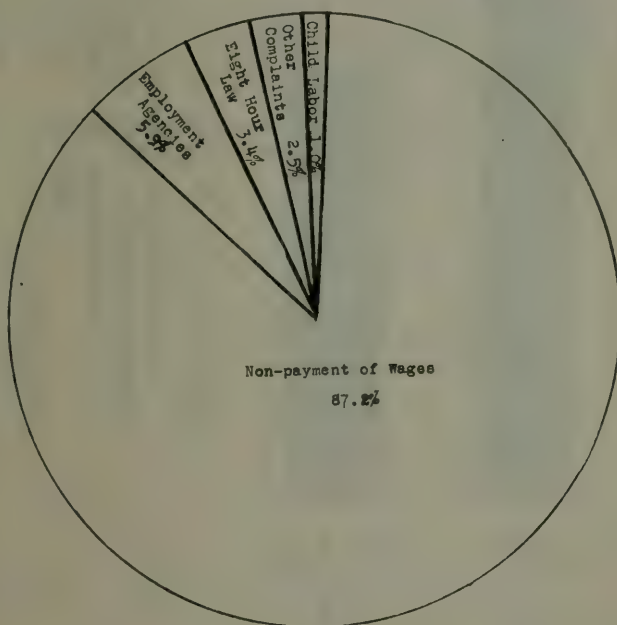

In the preceding tables were shown the total number of complaints received against alleged violations of all labor laws. Table 3, following, together with the accompanying chart, shows the numerical and percentage distribution of the various complaints taken care of by the agents and deputies of the bureau.

An examination of Table 3 shows that 87.2 per cent of all the complaints filed at the bureau referred to nonpayment of wages. The next largest number of complaints, 5.9 per cent, was against private employment agencies. Complaints against violations of the eight hour law for women, the child labor law, and the laws pertaining to sanitation and ventilation, eight hours on public work and underground work, and the weekly day of rest were, in order named, more numerous during the two fiscal years covered by this report. Under "miscellaneous laws" which constitute 2.2 per cent of the total complaints worked upon by the bureau's deputies are included such laws as the semimonthly pay day law, the blower law, the medical cabinet law, the seats for females law, the nine hour law for drug clerks, etc.

CHART III
PERCENTAGE DISTRIBUTION OF ALL COMPLAINTS
ACCORDING TO THE NATURE OF THE COMPLAINT
1923 - 1924
(Bureau of Labor Statistics)

The number and proportion which the wage complaints and all other complaints were of the total complaints received by the several district offices of the bureau from 1913 to 1924 are shown in Table 4. It will be observed that during the latest two fiscal years, as well as in most of the years since 1913, the wage complaints constituted over four-fifths of the total complaints filed at the bureau.

It will be noticed (Table 4) that during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1923, the number of "all other complaints" was 2229, compared with 1474 of all other complaints in 1922. This represents an increase of 755, or 51 per cent, of complaints other than wage complaints. However, during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1924, there was a decrease of 143 or 6.3 per cent of all other complaints, compared with the fiscal year 1923.

Chart IV, following Table 4, shows graphically the proportions which the wage complaints and all other complaints were of the total complaints filed at the bureau during the two biennial periods of 1921-1922 and 1923-1924.

An analysis of the data presented in Table 4 and Chart IV shows that during the latest biennial period compared with the preceding biennial period, the number of wage complaints increased 6,768, or 29.8 per cent, while the number of all other complaints increased 1163, or 36.9 per cent. These figures are arrived at as follows:

Complaints Against Private Employment Agencies.

The number of complaints against private employment agencies during the latest biennial period was 1873. This number represents an increase of 521, or 38.5 per cent, over the number of complaints against private employment agencies received during the preceding biennial period of 1921 and 1922. The number of licenses issued by the bureau to private employment agencies since 1913-1914, as well as the number of complaints against these agencies, is shown in Table 6. It will be observed that during the biennial period of 1917 and 1918 there was a decrease of 18.6 per cent in the number of licenses issued to private employment agencies. In the same biennial period there was also a decrease of 46.6 per cent in the number of complaints against private employment agencies filed with, and investigated by, the bureau. But from 1917-1918, the number of licenses issued to private employment agencies, as well as the number of complaints against these enterprises, has been steadily increasing.

Complaints against private employment agencies relate to misrepresentations regarding jobs, operating without licenses, and refusals to refund transportation when such refunds become payable under the private employment agency act.

The fluctuations in the number of complaints against employment agencies are shown on Chart V. The drop of the curve in 1917-1918 is accounted for by the decreased number of agencies and the corresponding drop in the number of complaints. From 1917-1918, the curve, it will be observed, is steadily climbing up, until, during 1923-1924, it reaches 1873 complaints.

FISCAL YEARS 1913 - 1924

Table 7 shows the number and disposition of the complaints against private employment agencies. Of the 899 complaints against these agencies in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1924, 532, or 59.2 per cent were for the return of fees and expenses. During the two fiscal years ended June 30, 1924, the bureau ordered the return of $5,113.55 in fees and expenses.

Complaints Against Eight Hour Law Violations.

During the biennial period of 1923-1924, the agents and deputies of the bureau investigated 1147 complaints against alleged violations of the eight hour law for women workers. In the preceding biennial period the number of similar complaints was 870. Thus, in the latest two fiscal years covered by this report, the increase in the number of eight hour law complaints was 277, or 31.8 per cent.

The table next presented (Table 8) shows the number of eight hour law complaints received at each of the several district offices of the bureau; it also shows the industries in which the violations took place.

The industries and institutions in which this law was alleged to have been most frequently violated are, in order named, as follows:

1. Restaurants.
2. Hotels, apartments, and boarding houses.
3. Retail stores.
4. Hospitals and sanitarium.
5. Manufacturing establishments (factories and shops).
6. Candy and confectionery shops.

COLLECTION OF UNPAID WAGES.

That the largest number of complaints handled in the several district offices of the bureau relate to nonpayment of wages was shown above in Table 3. Of the 33,801 various complaints worked upon by the bureau, 29,486, or 87.2 per cent, were complaints against employers who failed to pay wages when same became due under the laws of our state. Our laws pertaining to payment of wages provide for the payment of wages in cash or in negotiable paper, payable upon demand, without discount, at some bank or established place of business. They further provide that when an employee is discharged, "the wages or compensation for labor or service earned and unpaid at the time of such discharge shall become due and payable immediately." The wages of an employee, having no written contract, who quits or resigns his employment are "due and payable not later than seventy-two hours thereafter, unless such employee shall have given seventy-two hours previous notice of his intention to quit, in which latter case such employee shall be entitled to his wages or compensation at the time of quitting."

Section 7 of our wage collection law (Stats. 1919, Ch. 228) provides that:

"The commissioner and his representatives duly authorized by him in writing shall have the power and authority, when in his judgment he deems it necessary, to take assignments of wage claims and prosecute actions for the collection of wages and other demands of persons who are financially unable to employ counsel in cases in which, in the judgment of the commissioner, the claims for wages are valid and enforceable in the courts; to issue subpoenas, to compel the attendance of witnesses or parties and the production of books, papers or records, and to administer oaths and to examine witnesses under oath, and to take the verification or proof of instruments of writing, and to take depositions and affidavits for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act and all other acts now or hereafter placed in the bureau for enforcement."

Briefly stated, claims for wages are handled by the bureau as follows: Every wage claimant is interviewed by an agent or deputy of the bureau and the facts pertaining to the wages claimed are entered on uniform blanks used in all of the district offices of the bureau. The employer is then notified that a claim for unpaid wages has been lodged against him with the Labor Commissioner, and he is asked to explain his reasons for failing to pay the claimed wages. In most cases the employers are cited to appear at a hearing before the Commissioner or his deputies at a specified time, when the wage claimant is also cited to appear. This procedure enables the Commissioner or his deputies to secure all of the facts involved in wage disputes. At this hearing an attempt is made to settle the differences between the employer and employee and to accomplish the payment of wages whenever the wages appear to be legally due to the complainant. If no settlement can be arrived at, and the employer refuses to pay the amount of wages that has been determined upon as due the claimant, a citation is issued directing the employer to appear at the office of the district attorney, to show cause why a warrant should not be issued for his arrest. The matter in dispute is then again threshed out before a representative of the district attorney's office in the presence of the employer, the employee and a bureau's agent or deputy. If the employer still refuses to pay the amount of wages determined upon as coming to the complainant, a criminal warrant is issued for his arrest. Every effort is made to avoid court proceedings, but when no other alternative is available, criminal or civil action is started against the defaulting employer. As will be seen subsequently in this report, the bureau has started numerous civil actions for the recovery of unpaid wages in addition to the many criminal prosecutions instituted for the same purpose.

No work of the bureau is more important than the collection of unpaid wages. The fact is that this business of the labor bureau constitutes the major part of its activities. The achievements of the bureau are also greatest in this connection. During the twelve years from 1913 to 1924, the several branches of the Bureau of Labor Statistics collected nearly two and one-half million dollars, ($2,469,486) in unpaid wages. All these moneys were collected from defaulting employers without any charge to the workers. The growth of the bureau's business of collecting unpaid wages is shown in Tables 9 and 10 and on Charts VI and VII.

During the biennial period of 1923-1924, covered by this report, 29,486 wage complaints were received by the various district offices of the bureau (Table 9), while during the preceding two fiscal years 22,718 such complaints were filed with the bureau. In other words, the number of complaints handled in the two fiscal years of 1923 and 1924 was by 6768, or 29.8 per cent, greater than during the preceding two fiscal years. The increase in the amount of unpaid wages collected was even greater than the increase in the number of complaints received. Thus, the bureau collected the sum of $858,163.85 in the latest two fiscal years, as compared with $450,164.31 during the preceding two fiscal years, the amount of increase being $407,999.54, or 90.6 per cent.

Table 9 shows the progress of the bureau's wage collection activities by biennial periods, while the accompanying Chart VI illustrates the difference in wage collections during 1923-1924 and 1921 and 1922.

In Table 10 is shown, for each fiscal year, the number of wage complaints filed with the bureau, the number and per cent of total complaints collected, and the number and per cent increase each year over the preceding year.

It will be seen that in the fiscal year 1921, 47.2 per cent of the total wage claims were collected; in 1922, 45.7 per cent; 1923, 48.4 per cent; 1924, 55.0 per cent. Thus, during the latest three fiscal years the percentages of wage claims collected have been steadily increasing.

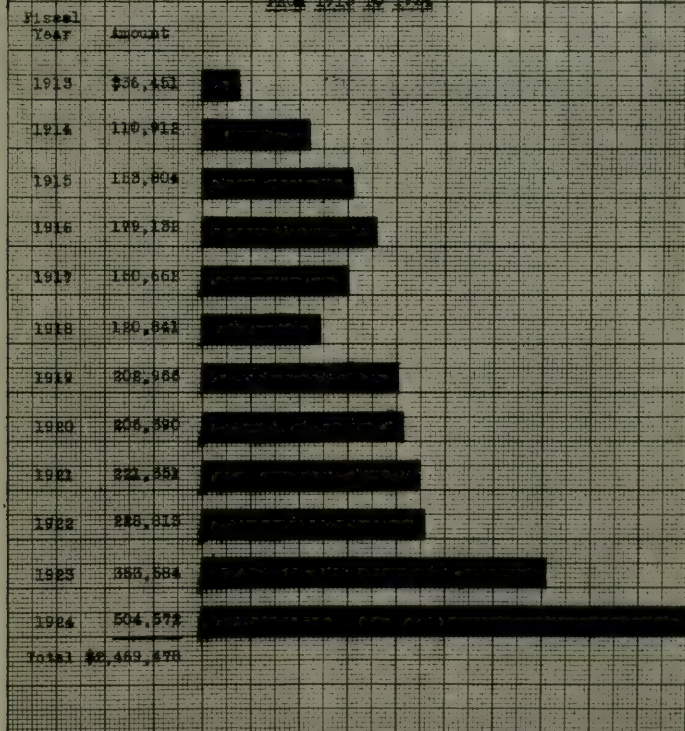

It is impossible to collect all of the wage claims presented to the bureau. Many wage complaints are filed with the bureau after the employer has become insolvent, making it very difficult and sometimes impossible to collect unpaid wages. Then, too, a certain proportion of the wage claims filed with the bureau prove, upon investigation, to have no merit; so that these wage claims are dismissed and are not collected.

The annual wage collections of all of the district offices of the bureau are shown on Chart VII. The last two bars on this chart show the remarkable gains made during each of the fiscal years of 1923 and 1924.

CHART VII
AMOUNT OF UNPAID WAGES COLLECTED
BY THE BUREAU OF LABOR STATISTICS
FROM 1913 TO 1924

Sizes of Wage Complaints.

The amounts involved in the wage claims filed with the Bureau of Labor Statistics vary from less than one dollar to many hundreds of dollars. The following table and chart (Table 11 and Chart VIII) illuminate this point in some detail.

There is hardly any difference in the sizes of wage claims filed in any of the district offices of the bureau. Thus, it will be observed (Table 11) that the percentages of wage claims under $25 of the total wage claims filed were the same, 38.8, in both the San Francisco and Los Angeles offices. The percentages of wage claims falling within $45 to $65 were 11.5 in the San Francisco office and 12.1 in the Los Angeles office. The same slight differences are noticeable in the wage claims for higher amounts. Thus, in the San Francisco office, 517, or 6.8 per cent of the total wage claims were for amounts of $225 or over; while in the Los Angeles office, the similar percentage was 6.4, a difference of only four-tenths of one per cent.

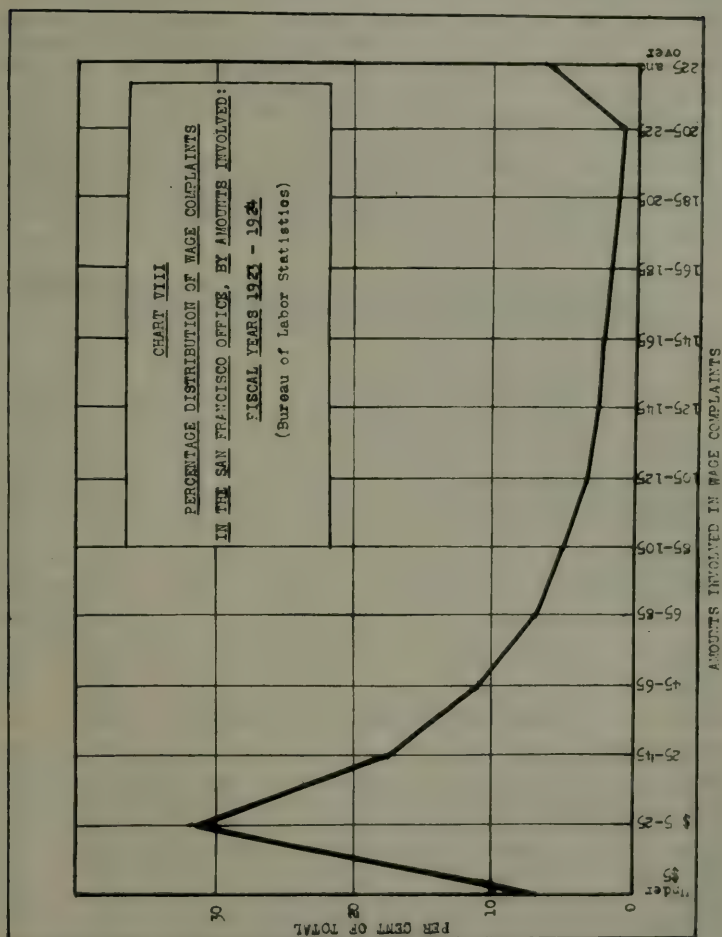

The data presented in Table 11 are pictured on Chart VIII. The modal average wage claim, that is the wage claim which occurs most frequently, is for an amount between $5 and $25, the percentage being 31.9. The data were plotted for the San Francisco office only. If the data for the Los Angeles office were plotted on the same chart, the curves would almost coincide, because of the similarity of the facts presented for both offices.

Occupations of Wage Complainants.

Table 13 shows the occupational distribution of the wage complainants. It will be noted that of the principal industries enumerated the largest proportion of complaints were, as could be expected, workers in manufacturing and mechanical industries. Of the total number of 26,340 wage complaints for which occupational statistics are shown in Table 13, 4203, or 16 per cent, were persons engaged in domestic and personal services. Of the total number of 3689 engaged in agricultural pursuits, 2107, or 57.1 per cent, were farm hands, while 609, or 16.5 per cent, were fruit pickers. It will be observed further that of the 2118 engaged in rendering professional services, 993, or 46.9 per cent, were nurses, while 396, or 18.7 per cent, were actors.

The fact that so large a proportion of wage complainants are farm workers emphasizes the need of liens upon crops for work performed in connection with the harvesting of same, so as to insure the payment of wages to farm laborers.

Savings to the Workers of the State.

It is worth while to point out that as a result of the bureau's enforcement of the state wage laws, the workers of California have been spared large expenditures of money in legal fees. Were it not for the existing laws pertaining to payment of wages, vesting with the Commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics the power to enforce payment, most of the workers having wage claims would be compelled to resort to paid legal aid. In a large number of cases the complainant would not take the trouble and time to engage lawyers, since the amounts involved in the complaints would be too small to justify starting legal actions. It was shown above (Table 12) that 38.2 per cent of all claims for wages are for less than $25. However, where the amounts are large enough to warrant legal proceedings, the attorneys' fees would range approximately from one-third to one-half of the wages collected. On this basis it might be estimated that through the activities of the bureau in collecting unpaid wages, the workers of California have saved, during the latest biennial period, from one-third to one-half of the $858,163.85 collected by the bureau in unpaid wages, or from $286,000 to $429,000. This represents an average annual saving in legal fees of from $143,000 to $215,000. This estimate does not take into consideration the amount of wages which would have never been recovered by the workers in cases where the amounts of unpaid wages are too small to justify the worker's expenditure of time that would be required in starting legal actions.

Civil Actions in Wage Complaints.

All wage complaints, regardless of their size, are sedulously attended to by the agents and deputies of the labor bureau. Some wage complaints, however, owing to the number of workers affected, amount of wages due and unpaid, and the complications involved, require special attention. Numerous complaints lead either to the arrests of the defaulting employers on charges of misdemeanors, or to civil actions calculated to recover the unpaid wages earned by the complaining employe. During the two fiscal years referred to in this report, approximately two hundred criminal prosecutions were started by the bureau on behalf of workers who were wilfully deprived of their earnings. The number of civil prosecutions is smaller, but civil prosecutions are much more complicated and require the continual attention of the bureau's attorneys. Our laws pertaining to nonpayment of wages provide that the labor commissioner may prosecute actions for the collection of wages on behalf of persons financially unable to employ counsel. The following partial list of firms against which civil action was begun by the labor commissioner to recover unpaid wages will illustrate this phase of the activities of the Bureau of Labor Statistics:

COURT DECISIONS RELATING TO OUR WAGE LAWS.

There is no decision by any court of this state declaring unconstitutional the section of the State Wage Law making it a misdemeanor offense for an employer having the ability to pay to wilfully refuse to pay wages when due. (Section 6, Statutes 1919, Chapter 202.)

The question has been raised as to the constitutionality of this section of the law, and some confusion has arisen on account of the early decision in the case In re Crane, 26 Cal. App. 22, decided in 1914. In order to clear up any misunderstanding of the decision in that case, it is only necessary to state that this decision was not based on the existing wage law but on the old act of 1911, which was clearly unconstitutional in that it provided for imprisonment by mesne process for debt, regardless of the ability of the employer to pay the wages and regardless of whether or not fraud appeared in the transaction. This law was accordingly declared unconstitutional by the Appellate Court in 1914.

In 1915 the legislature passed a new wage law which added the element of fraud and ability to pay, and these elements were stressed still further when in 1919 the legislature repealed the acts of 1911 and 1915, and in an entirely new wage law, clarified the matter by making the penal section read as follows:

Sec. 6. Any person, firm, association, or corporation, or agent, manager, superintendent, or officer thereof, who having the ability to pay, shall wilfully refuse to pay the wages due and payable when demanded, as herein provided, or falsely deny the amount or validity thereof, or that the same is due, with intent to secure for himself, his employer or other person, any discount upon such indebtedness, or with intent to annoy, harass, or oppress, or hinder, or delay, or defraud, the person to whom such indebtedness is due, shall, in addition to any other penalty imposed upon him by this act, be guilty of a misdemeanor."

Thus we see that our present wage law was placed on our statute books in 1919, and that the Crane case can not in any way be held to impair that law.

The Appellate Court, moreover, in three recent decisions, indicated how it feels towards the wage law as it now stands, and has in no uncertain language stated its belief in the constitutionality in toto, although the penalty section (section 5) alone was before the court. In the case of Moore vs. Indian Spring Channel Gold Mining Co., 37 Cal. App. 370 (1918) the court went into the public necessity which required a law for the protection of wage earners, and refers to many cases in other jurisdictions in which statutes making it a misdemeanor offense to fraudulently refuse to pay wages when due have been upheld, and concludes with this statement:

"We can discover no ground for holding the act to be violative of any provision of our constitution or that it violated the fourteenth amendment of the national constitution."

In the case of Manford vs. Singh, 40 Cal. App. 700 (1919), the court reiterates its stand in the following words:

"But the appellant concedes that our statute is within the sanction of the constitution if it can be reasonably held that the prompt payment of employee's wages is a matter that affects the public generally and is within the police power of the legislature. That suggests the very reason why such legislation is permissible, imposing, as it does, a certain limitation upon the right to contract.

"This consideration is fully set forth in the Moore decision, supra, and there is no necessity for further specific attention to it.

"We may add, that, manifestly, the statute should have reasonable construction. Its design is to protect the employee and to promote the welfare of the community. Without defeating that purpose it should be construed so as to hamper as little as possible the valuable right and privilege of making contracts. But it is to be observed that the most formidable objection to the statutes derives its principal force from the supposed hardships of a hypothetical case wherein the employer is without fault or the employee is guilty of culpable conduct. The statute is not subject to such reproach. It contemplates that the penalty shall be enforced against an employer who is at fault. It must be shown that he owes the debt and refuses to pay it. He is not denied any legal defense to the validity of the claim. Indeed, the fullest right to contract as to payment is but slightly restricted, and an employer can easily provide in advance for the contingencies that may arise under the statute. If he refuses to pay what is due as therein provided, it is not unjust that he should be subjected to a penalty."

The penalty section of the law was again upheld in 1922 by the Appellate Court in the case of Martin vs. Young, 57 Cal. App. 631, and we can see no reason for any contention to the effect that the law is unconstitutional in any particular. The Supreme Court of California has, moreover, held that it is a criminal offense for an employer to give a note in payment of wages, whether with fraudulent intent or not (In re Ballestra, 173 Cal. 657).

In upholding the constitutionality of the pay check law, (Labor Laws of 1923, p. 76), in the case of In re Ballestra (1916), 173 Cal. 657, the California Supreme Court in a unanimous decision written by Justice Shaw uses the following language:

"Section 2 makes a violation of the act a misdemeanor, punishable by fine or imprisonment or both.

"In considering this statute, we may presume in support of the legislative enactment that some employers in this state had adopted and followed the custom of paying the daily, weekly or monthly wages of their employees, when due, by giving orders for the amount thereof payable only in goods, or in orders of an indefinite nature not payable on demand, but at some future time. The purpose of the statute evidently is to prevent the evils which the legislature considered had arisen from such practices.

"The right to make contracts, like other personal or property rights, is subject to reasonable regulation designed and calculated to promote the general convenience, prosperity and welfare (Mutual Loan Co. vs. Martell, 222 U. S. 225, 232) (Ann. Cas. 1913B, 529, 56 L. Ed. 175, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74). Laws having a reasonable tendency to accomplish these results, and not imposing unreasonable burdens upon individuals, are valid. The provisions of the statute in question do not transgress this rule. As applied to ordinary transactions between employers and employees, of the kind embraced within its terms, the statute is, in our opinion, valid and constitutional."

WAGES OF ALASKA CANNERY HANDS.

The bureau is supervising the paying off of Alaska salmon boat crews. This work was begun by the bureau in 1913, in accordance with the provisions of an act passed by the legislature of that year. This act, which was recommended by the bureau with a view to safeguarding the interests of this class of workers, reads, in part, as follows:

Sec. 2. Upon application of either the employer or the employee, the wages earned in seasonal labor, shall be paid in the presence of the commissioner of the bureau of labor statistics or an examiner appointed by him.

Sec. 3. The commissioner shall hear and decide all disputes arising from wages earned in seasonal labor and he shall allow or reject any deductions made from such wages; provided, however, that he shall reject all deductions made for gambling debts incurred by the employee during such employment and for liquor sold to the employee during such employment.

Tables 15 to 17, inclusive, show the earnings of the Alaska cannery hands. In examining these tables, it should be remembered that prior to the time the bureau began supervising the paying off of Alaska cannery hands, these workers would spend most of their earnings for drink and gambling, either en route to and from Alaska or in Alaska; so that upon their return to San Francisco they would have little money left and would be most likely to become public charges.

As shown in Table 15, the average amount due each man upon arrival at San Francisco in 1922 was $127.65, while in 1923 it was $120.40. In both of these years the amounts due upon arrival were lower than either 1920 or in 1921.

Table 16 shows the average earnings per man for the entire season, including money advanced and deductions on account of merchandise purchased before or after sailing. It will be seen that the average earnings per man for the season of 1922 was $186.97, while for 1923 it was $185.33, a difference of only $1.64. The difference between the average earnings per man per season and the average amount due upon return to San Francisco is explained by the deductions from the season's earnings of cash advances and purchases en route, in Alaska, and upon return to San Francisco. These deductions are explained in Table 17. In this table the several items of deductions for 1030 men are shown in detail. Thus, it will be noted that of the total amount of $67,457.58 deducted from these men's earnings for the season, $33,581 or 49.8 per cent, was for merchandise bought in San Francisco. The next largest amount was for $16,099.35, or 23.9 per cent, for merchandise in Alaska. The third highest amount deducted was $11,840, or 17.6 per cent of the total deductions. This amount was advanced to these men before sailing for Alaska. The importance of these figures lies in the fact that the storekeepers where the merchandise in San Francisco is bought are also the labor contractors who supply help to the Alaska salmon packers.

The legislature should afford additional protections to the men who are hired annually to be sent to Alaska. These men are induced to sign contracts which they do not understand and which bind them to hard labor and working conditions for a period of six months. They are always preyed upon by labor contractors and merchants who exploit the ignorance of these workers in order to enrich themselves.

It should be clearly understood that the men referred to in the preceding three tables (Tables 15-17) are the cannery hands who are hired under what is known as the "Oriental Contract System." The fishermen, who are organized workers, are not included in the above tables on earnings. The races of the Oriental contract labor employed in the salmon canneries during 1922 are given in the following tabulation taken from the biennial report of the Territorial Labor Commissioner to the Governor of Alaska:

CRIMINAL PROSECUTIONS.

During the two fiscal years ending June 30, 1924, the bureau started 294 prosecutions against labor law violations. During the preceding two fiscal years, the number of prosecutions started was 80. While there was thus more than twice the number of criminal prosecutions started in the latter two years, the percentage of convictions was less. However, the number of convictions secured in the latest two fiscal years covered by this report was 106, as compared with 51 during the preceding two fiscal years. Table 19 shows, for biennial periods since 1911, the number of prosecutions and convictions, as well as the percentages of convictions of total prosecutions.

The disposition of the prosecutions and the laws violated are described in Table 20. It will be noted that wage complaints are the principal causes of criminal prosecutions. Of the 294 criminal prosecutions started during the latest two fiscal years, 230, or 78 per cent, were because of non-payment of wages.

It frequently happens that the offending employers offer to pay the wages they owe as soon as they are arrested on criminal charges of wilfully failing to pay wages. In such instances, the cases are withdrawn and settled out of court—a practice usually encouraged by the courts.

THE STATE FREE PUBLIC EMPLOYMENT BUREAUS.

Number of Jobs Filled.

Detailed statistics relating to the operations of the state free public employment bureaus are presented in Part III of this report. The following is a summary of the work of these bureaus.

During the two fiscal years covered by this report the state free public employment offices furnished 474,691 free jobs, compared with 345,410 free jobs furnished during the preceding two fiscal years. The difference in the number of jobs furnished during these two periods is 129,281, or 37.4 per cent.

The number of jobs filled by the state free employment offices each fiscal year from 1921 to 1924 is shown in Chart IX while the number of jobs furnished during the two latest biennial periods is exhibited graphically in Chart X.

Table 23 and Chart XI show the average monthly placements during the five calendar years of 1919 to 1923. The monthly placements during the calendar year 1924 are also shown in this chart.

In the following table (Table 21) are shown the numbers of jobs filled by each of the free offices established by the bureau, as well as percentages of the total jobs furnished by each of the offices.

STATE FREE PUBLIC EMPLOYMENT OFFICES
DURING THE FOUR FISCAL YEARS 1921 - 1924
(Bureau of Labor Statistics)

EMPLOYMENT OFFICES OF THE BUREAU OF LABOR STATISTICS
DURING THE BIENNIAL PERIOD OF 1922-1923 AND 1923-1924
COMPARED WITH THE PRECEDING BIENNIAL PERIOD OF 1920-1921 AND 1921-1922

The Bakersfield office was discontinued on December 31, 1923, because of inadequate business at that bureau. The San Diego free employment office was opened on December 1, 1923. Excluding these two offices, the following tabulation shows the ranks of the several permanent free employment offices according to the percentages of jobs they filled during both of the fiscal years covered by this report.

Rank of offices	Percentages of total jobs filled in 1922- 1923 and 1923-1924.

2. San Francisco.....	22.0
3. Oakland.....	13.7
4. Fresno.....	5.6
5. San Jose.....	5.5
6. Sacramento.....	4.4
7. Stockton.....	3.0

The seasonal offices at Lodi, Marysville, Modesto, and Chico were not opened by the bureau during 1924, because of the plentiful supply of labor during that year. The regular opening of seasonal offices in these cities would be of great help to the farmers who are often hard pressed for workers in the harvesting of their crops.

Industries Served.

In the next table (Table 22) the industries are arranged in the order of the highest percentages of jobs filled in them by the free public employment bureaus in 1922-1923.

It will be noticed that the industries in which most of the jobs were filled in the fiscal years 1922-1923 and 1923-1924 were building construction, hotels, restaurants, etc., agriculture, private homes, and wholesale and retail trade. The same five principal industries were the highest in 1920-1921 and 1921-1922 as regards the services rendered them by the state free public employment offices.

Most of the jobs filled by the free public bureaus during 1922-1923 and 1923-1924 were, as will be seen, in the building construction industry.

CHART XI

MONTHLY PLACEMENTS MADE BY THE STATE FREE PUBLIC EMPLOYMENT OFFICES DURING THE CALENDAR YEAR 1924 COMPARED WITH THE AVERAGE MONTHLY PLACEMENTS DURING THE FIVE
CALENDAR YEARS 1919 TO 1923

Labor Requested and Labor Supplied.

During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1923, the several free employment bureaus received 182,902 applications for help calling for 332,981 persons. The number of workers supplied during this year was 279,029 or 83.8 per cent of the total 332,981 wanted by employers.

In the fiscal year ended June 30, 1924, the number of applications for help received from employers was 137,481, requesting 222,155 persons. The number of workers supplied during the fiscal year was 195,662, or 88.1 per cent of the total number of workers requested by the employers.

Thus, it will be seen that in both of the fiscal years covered by this report, the free public employment bureaus filled approximately the same proportion of jobs offered by employers. Owing to the greater supply of labor during the latter fiscal year, the proportion of jobs filled is also greater than in the preceding fiscal year.

It should be remembered that the number of jobs filled is not synonymous with the number of persons placed. Thus, in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1922-1923, the number of individuals placed was 91,773 and the number of jobs filled was 279,029, making a ratio of positions to individuals of 3.04. In the fiscal year ended June 30, 1923-1924, the corresponding ratio was 3.05.

Cost per Job.

The cost to the state of filling the 474,691 jobs during the fiscal years of 1922-1923 and 1923-1924 was $171,341.32, or 36 cents per job. In the preceding two fiscal years the cost per job was 54 cents. In other words, during the two fiscal years covered by this report there has been an increase of 37.4 per cent in the number of jobs filled and a decrease of 33.3 per cent in the cost of filling each job. It should be remembered in this connection that the number of jobs filled by the several offices and by all offices combined varies with industrial conditions. Thus, it will be observed that in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1924, a period of relative industrial inactivity, the total number of jobs filled by all of the free employment offices was 195,662, or 83,367, 29.8 per cent, less than in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1923.

Savings to the Workers.

The cost to the state in furnishing each free job has been estimated above at 36 cents. The average fees, counting jobs of various durations charged by private common labor employment agencies in 1922-1923 was $1.99, while in 1923-1924 the average fee charged by these agencies was $1.91. What the workers would have had to pay for the jobs they secure free of charge from the state bureau even if they had to pay the lowest average fee shown, $1.91, is estimated as follows: Approximately, 54 per cent of the jobs filled by the free public employment bureaus are jobs lasting eight days or longer. If the workers who secure jobs from the free bureaus were compelled to pay the average fee of $1.91 only for the jobs lasting eight days or longer and if they were to secure the other jobs, lasting less than eight days, free of charge, their total outlay for the jobs of longer duration would amount to $489,596.03. Fifty-four per cent of the total 474,691 jobs filled by the bureau's free employment offices during the two fiscal years ended June 30, 1924, amounts to 256,333 jobs. Multiplying this number of jobs by $1.91, the lowest average fee charged by private employment agencies, the resultant sum of $489,596.03 represents the amount the workers would have to pay in the absence of the state free employment offices. The total amount of money expended by the state for the support of the free employment bureaus during the two fiscal years ended June 30, 1924, was $171,341.32, which compares favorably with $489,596.03, the amount saved by the workers through the operation of the state free employment offices.

PRIVATE EMPLOYMENT AGENCIES.

Table 24 shows the number of employment agencies licensed by the Bureau of Labor Statistics from April 1, 1924, to November 1, 1924, by classes of agencies. Of the 294 employment agencies licensed, the largest number were general agencies, that is, agencies furnishing all kinds of help, usually exclusive of those handled by the specialized agencies. The general agencies constitute 32.7 per cent of all agencies; the commercial are 23.5 per cent of the total; hotel and domestic, 13.9 per cent; theatrical 11.6 per cent; Oriental 8.8 per cent; nurses, 5.1 per cent; and teachers 4.4 per cent of the total.

Of the total number of 294 agencies licensed, 62, or 21.0 per cent, are in San Francisco; 109, or 37.2 per cent, are in Los Angeles; while 123, or 41.8 per cent, are outside of these two largest cities in the state.

The number of private employment agencies licensed by the bureau each year since 1910 is shown in Table 25. The drop in the number of private agencies licensed from 1915 to 1918 is due to the introduction and the competition of the state free public employment bureaus during these years. However, since 1920 there has been a steady increase, year by year, in the number of private employment agencies licensed by the bureau. Although the activities of the state free public employment offices have been constantly increasing, as is shown by their increased placements, still the number of free employment offices has not increased with the demand for labor throughout the state. There are needed more offices in some of the larger cities of the state, as well as more seasonal offices to care for the requirements of labor in the moving of the crops.

An examination of Table 26 shows that both during the years 1922-1923 and 1923-1924 the highest proportion of the total fees were collected by the general employment agencies. In 1922-1923 these agencies were 39.4 per cent of the total agencies, and their proportion of the total fees collected was 40.8 per cent. In 1923-1924 these agencies were 36.5 per cent of the total agencies tabulated, while their fee collections were 42.4 per cent of the total.

The commercial employment agencies, it will be observed, were, in 1922-1923, 25.2 per cent of the total agencies tabulated, but their fee collections were 36.5 per cent of the total fees collected. The year following, the commercial agencies were 28.0 per cent of the total tabulated, whereas their fee collections were 34.7 per cent of the total.

The percentages of the total fees collected by the nurses and Oriental agencies, in both years, were smaller than those of the other agencies listed in Table 26.

The fees collected by theatrical agencies were not included in Tables 1-6 relating to private employment agencies. The reason for this omission is that the various theatrical agencies differ considerably in their methods of doing business; so that their reports could not be compared with the reports of the other agencies.

In examining the data presented in Tables 27, 28 and 29, it should be remembered that the average fees shown are for jobs of various duration. Both temporary and permanent jobs are included in these averages.

THE TEN PER CENT LAW.

The 1923 session of the California legislature made several significant changes in the state private employment agency act. One of these changes requires that all licensed employment agencies must file with the state labor commissioner maximum schedules of fees to be charged by the agencies. Changes in these schedules may be made as frequently as the employment agents desire, but these changes may not become effective until seven days after the date of filing the amended schedule with the state labor commissioner. The purpose of this amendment to the employment agency act was to prevent sudden increases in fees when jobs become scarce.

Another, more significant change in the employment agency act, was an amendment limiting the fees to be charged by employment agencies. This amendment, which has been invalidated by the California Supreme Court, read as follows:

"No applicant for employment classed as manual shall in any case be charged a fee in excess of seven per centum of the wages or salary earned for the first month, or earned for the first twenty-six working days, if the wages or salary is fixed by the day; or, if such employment is for a period less than a month or twenty-six working days, the fee charged shall in no case exceed seven per centum of the wages or salary earned. In all other employment, which classification shall include also semi-manual employments such as those of clerks, bookkeepers, typists, stenographers, domestics, and mercantile, office, professional and semi-professional employments, the fee charged shall in no case exceed ten per centum of the wages or salary earned for the first month, the twenty-six working days, or shorter period, to be determined in the same manner as in the case of manual employments. In determining any such per centum proper allowance may be made for items of board, lodging, or other consideration or privilege, or for differences arising by reason of rating the compensation otherwise than according to the time of work or service.

"This section shall not apply to an association of teachers conducting an employment agency exclusively for the purpose of securing employment for its own members, nor to bona fide schools, having been established for at least three years, securing employment for its own pupils without compensation."

While the amendment just quoted refers to manual, semi-manual, and professional occupations, it affected almost exclusively commercial and teachers' agencies. Manual, or general labor employment agencies, do not, as a rule, charge seven per cent of the applicant's first month's wages, or the equivalent thereof. Other employment agencies, such as hotel and domestic, nurses', or oriental agencies, very seldom charge in excess of ten per cent of the first month's wages. The limitation of fees amendment, which during the agitation preceding its enactment, became known as "the ten per cent law," therefore, was aimed at the high fees of the clerical and teachers' agencies.

The ten per cent law* was signed by Governor Friend W. Richardson on June 18, 1923, in spite of the vigorous efforts on the part of the organized private employment agencies of the state to prevent its passage. The amendment was to become effective on August 17, 1923, but an injunction secured by the agencies prevented it from becoming operative, and subsequent litigation resulted in the nullification of the law by the state supreme court.

During the court proceedings which determined the fate of the ten per cent law, statistics bearing upon the operations of the commercial and teachers' agencies were submitted in evidence by the attorneys for the employment agencies, as well as by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

*This law was introduced by Senator Roy Fellom. Many labor organizations and many civic and fraternal associations and clubs favored the passage of this amendment to the employment agency act of the state.

The Injunction.

Before presenting statistics pertaining to the operations of the employment agencies here considered, it will be interesting to review the court proceedings which led to the abrogation of the ten per cent law.

On August 13, 1923, W. W. Payne, operating the Fisk Teachers Agency in Los Angeles, secured a temporary injunction against Walter G. Mathewson, Commissioner of Labor of the State of California, restraining the commissioner, "pending the determination of the action, from enforcing * * * or from arresting or causing the arrest of the plaintiff or other persons, firms or corporations similarly situated to the plaintiff for non-compliance with the provisions of said act, or from doing any act tending to compel the plaintiff or such other persons, firms or corporations to comply with the terms of said statutes."

The Superior Court Decision.

The case was tried in the superior court of Los Angeles, with the result that the permanent injunction applied for by the agencies was denied but the temporary injunction remained in effect, subject to the determination of the questions involved by the Supreme Court of the State. Four days, from September 11 to September 14, were consumed in the hearings on this action. Attorney General U. S. Webb personally defended the statute against the legal talent employed by the California Employment Board, the association of the California employment agencies. The Attorney General was ably assisted by his deputy, Mr. Irwin W. Widney, as well as by Messrs. Henry Heidelberg, and A. W. Brouillet, attorneys, representing respectively the California State Federation of Labor and the San Francisco Bar Association.

Honorable Paul Burks, the presiding judge, rendered a "bench decision," in which he summarized the arguments of the attorneys for the employment agencies and stated his opinion as follows:

The validity of the act of June 18, 1923, chapter 414 of the laws of 1923, is attacked upon the grounds:

1. That, under the guise of regulation, it is an illegal attempt to prohibit the business in which the plaintiffs and others similarly situated are lawfully engaged;
2. That its effect will be to render it impossible for them to transact their business at a profit;
3. That it constitutes an unwarranted, unreasonable and illegal attempt to interfere with the right of contract of the plaintiffs and of others similarly situated; and
4. That for these reasons it invades rights, privileges, and immunities guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States and by the Constitution of the State of California.

Presentation of the issues joined have been approached along broad lines, unhampered by unnecessary technicalities, and the court is much indebted to counsel for the generous, courteous and helpful manner in which they have responded to their duties as officers of the court.

Speedily to reach a decision which will promote the ends of substantial, remedial justice is not an easy task—especially in view of a consciousness of the effect which a holding adverse to the contentions of the plaintiffs may have upon well established business conducted by intimate personal friends of long standing.

The decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in Brazee vs. Michigan, 241 U. S. 340, leaves no room to doubt the right of a state to subject employment agencies to reasonable rules and regulations to prevent unfair practices towards applicants for employment.

Conceding this right which is now being exercised pursuant to the provisions of the Act of June 3, 1915, as amended, the questions to which able arguments have been directed are:

First. Whether the state may, in the exercise of police power, regulate the fees which private employment agencies may charge for their services; and, if so, then,

Second. Whether the maximum charges sought to be prescribed are so unjustly low as to be confiscatory or so unreasonable as to infringe constitutional guaranties.

As bearing upon the first proposition the contention of the plaintiffs finds support in the decision of the Supreme Court of California in the case of In re Dickey, 144 Cal. 234; Wilson vs. City and County of Denver, 178 Pac. 17, and in some of the other decisions referred to in the argument of counsel. Opposed to these to some extent is the action of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Brazee vs. Michigan, 241 U. S. 340, in sustaining the validity of the Michigan statute containing a section limiting the fees which might be charged. It is true that the prosecution in this case and the conviction under it was not based upon the fee section of the Michigan law, nor was the validity of that section passed upon by the Supreme Court. The doctrine of stare decisis can not with safety to the republic be too rigidly adhered to. Our courts should not be so fettered by the weight of authority as to prevent forward steps calculated to promote the general welfare of society. Changes in industrial and economic conditions necessitate recessions from long established views and render necessary new regulations. Constitutional guarantees essential to just and stable government are not to be lightly infringed. The importance of protecting the property rights as well as the liberties of our people can not be overemphasized. Our Constitution, however, is sufficiently flexible and pliable to enable it to contract and expand as public necessity may require, and the reflection in the decisions of our courts of an appreciation of this fact will go far towards curbing a spirit of unrest and increase respect for our institutions.

It may safely be assumed that the legislation under consideration was enacted for the purpose of correcting abuses regarded by the Legislature as being so flagrant as to require correction.

There is today a higher standard of justice in all the affairs of life than in the past. An awakened conscience has outlawed commercial standards that were false and subversive of real progress. An aroused sense of the duty which each member of society owes to every other member of society is responsible for much of the recent remedial legislation. Laws must be justified by something more than the will of the majority. They must rest upon the eternal foundation of righteousness. It is the duty of the court to give effect to the legislative will, unless it is a palpable invasion of the constitutional guarantees.

The court is not unmindful of the persuasiveness of argument of plaintiffs and of the decisions cited in support thereof. These arguments have frequently been employed to defeat what has later, after fair trial, proven to constitute real progress. The conclusiveness of the argument directed towards the constitutionality or unconstitutionality of the law in question has not been demonstrated to a degree that carries conviction to the court. In these circumstances it is the plain duty of the court, in the case of doubt, to sustain the will of the electors as determined by their legislators. This court is not prepared to hold that the Act actually and flagrantly goes beyond the field proper for the exercise of the police power or that it widens that field, and in the circumstances it becomes the duty of the court to sustain the validity of what was enacted and approved in the belief that it was needed humanitarian and remedial legislation.

It is true that the case In re Dickey appears to sustain the contention of the plaintiff. At the time that decision was rendered in 1904, the Supreme Court of the United States had not passed upon the question as to the right of a state to regulate the particular agency here involved. In 1913, in following the decision in the Dickey case, the Legislature of California assumed jurisdiction over the subject-matter, and since that time has exercised the right to regulate the agency here involved. The court is of the opinion that the dissenting opinion of Mr. Associate Justice Shaw in In re Dickey is, in view of the changes which twenty years have wrought in our industrial and economic life, more in consonance with the dominating spirit of our times. Particularly pertinent to the situation here presented is that portion of the opinion in which it is said: "I think it is a mistake to say that our heritage from the common law in this respect consists solely of the specific right to pass such laws, without regard either to their wisdom or to the conditions which sanction the exercise of the power. Our heritage is rather the sound principle that, in the performance of its duty to promote the general welfare, a declared object of the Constitution of the United States, the Legislature may pass such laws as may reasonably be found necessary to protect the helpless and weak from the exaction of the strong."

Having reached the conclusion that it is the duty of the court to refrain from declaring that the exercise of the power to prescribe maximum fees was beyond the power of the Legislature, it then becomes necessary to determine whether plaintiffs have sustained the burden of establishing whether maximum charges are fixed so low as to be confiscatory or so unreasonable as to amount to a prohibition against the carrying on of a lawful business.

Many of the statements, and evidence bearing upon this phase of the case, do not carry conviction to the mind of the court. There is room for belief that some of them are the result of rather loose methods of accounting and do not accurately reflect correctly the real conditions of the business to which they relate. Some of them show net profits which constitute a very handsome percentage of the gross receipts. These statements which reflect the best business usage show largest percentage of gross receipts as profits.

In this connection, I might say that I do not regard the showing made with respect to the Community Placement Bureau as a fair test. A tabulation of the statements will reflect that the proportion of gross receipts, which can be shown as net profits, range from seventeen per cent, which is the lowest, up to sixty-six per cent, which is the highest. These figures are approximate and based upon a calculation which the court believes is in all respects accurate, although made in some haste under somewhat adverse circumstances. The court has not undertaken to arrive at what is the average percentage of gross receipts which would reflect net profits in the column showing net profits; but the court is of the opinion that the plaintiffs have failed to sustain the burden cast upon them of showing that the effect of the statute would be a prohibition rather than a regulation.

A nisi prins decision in this case will not satisfy the necessities of a situation which, in the interest of the parties and of the public, should be clarified and freed from doubt without unnecessary delay. The questions here involved should be authoritatively determined by our Supreme Court before the next legislature. Such determination can hardly be expected by an appeal from a decision suspending the operation of the law involved. Consolation for the fact that the views here expressed will not be accepted as determinative of the questions involved is to be found in the thought that the views expressed may serve to direct attention to the importance of giving to well-directed humanitarian legislation a construction which, without breaking down any of those constitutional guaranties so essential to the protection of property rights, will go far towards overcoming an all too prevalent spirit of unrest and best tend to command that respect to which our courts are entitled.

The conclusions reached have not been unduly influenced by the fact that they will afford a method best calculated to secure a speedy determination of the matter by the court of last resort of the highly important questions here involved.

The prayer of the complainant will be denied and the temporary restraining order heretofore entered in Case No. 126,812 will be set aside.

The Supreme Court Decision.

Judge Burks' decision upholding the constitutionality of the ten per cent law was made on September 14, 1923. On November 7, 1923, the case was presented to the Supreme Court on a writ of habeas corpus, in an endeavor to get a speedy decision from the highest court of the state.

In the hearings before the Supreme Court, the defense attorneys for the employment agencies repeated their attack upon the law on the grounds that the law in question was an illegal attempt to interfere with the right of contract and that the proposed regulation of fees was confiscatory in nature and if enforced, would render it impossible for the agencies to conduct their businesses. Great stress was laid by the attorneys for the employment agencies upon the Dickey case (144 Cal., 234), referred to in Judge Burks' decision, as well as upon the Adkins vs. Children's Hospital case (43 Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 394), the recent minimum wage case, in their efforts to substantiate their arguments that the ten per cent law was an unconstitutional interference with the right of contract. To support their contention that the agencies could not operate on a ten per cent fee, numerous affidavits showing the gross receipts, expenses, and gross profits of the agencies were submitted by the attorneys for the employment agencies.

The Attorney General argued that the amendatory act in question was fully within the police power of the state. In the course of his extended legal arguments, he said:

One of the chief concerns of government, and perhaps the chief concern of government, is the conservation, the preservation of the general welfare. That means not exactly the greatest good to the greatest number, but it does involve that, but means more. It means the administration of government so that the best interests of the largest proportion of the people will be conserved and preserved. There is no such thing under our system of government, nor indeed any other system of government with which I am familiar, as the right, or rather as the liberty, the absolute liberty or absolute freedom of contract. Government has the right and power and it is the duty of government to limit the right of contract whenever public necessity, public interest, general welfare, will be best subserved by that limitation. There is no absolute right in any person, or combination of persons, to carry on at a profit a particular business. It is the right of any person to carry on any lawful business at a profit so long as the laws in force permit that business to be so carried on. But if that business is carried on at charges, or at a cost which so detrimentally affects the general welfare that it is inimical to the best interests of government that the business be carried on at that charge, then it is the right and duty of government to restrict the charge which the business may impose at or to a figure which will remove the objectionable, the dangerous, the hurtful elements. When you consider public interest and general welfare, there is no absolute right in these petitioners to carry on the business of an employment agency in this state, and by absolute right I mean there is no such right as may not be interfered with by the government through its proper agency, provided the conditions exist which authorize that arm of government to interfere. In other words, if the business of an employment agency as conducted prior to the passage of this statute was conducted in such manner, and there were imposed by the business such charges against those whom it served, or for whom it labored, that public interests, general welfare, were detrimentally affected, then the right and power of government to reduce that charge to a figure that would remove that detriment, exists, and the charge can be reduced to the point at which that detriment is removed, and if that point be so low that the business cannot thereafter be profitably conducted, the business must suffer the loss, not the public.

The Supreme Court based its decision, declaring the ten per cent law unconstitutional, principally upon the Dickey and the Adkins vs. Children's Hospital cases. The unsigned, "fatherless" opinion of the court was rendered on February 26, 1924; it was very brief, and read, in part, as follows:

The act is assailed by petitioner on the ground that it is in contravention of the constitution of the United States and particularly the due process clause of the fifth amendment thereto. Also that it contravenes the provisions of sections 1 and 13 of article 1 of the constitution of this state.

These objections find support in our decisions and also in the decisions of the United States Supreme Court. The constitutional question raised is not a new one. The legislature of 1903 adopted a statute which placed a limitation on the amount of fees that an employment agency may charge which in legal effect was identical with the limitation fixed in the act before us and this court in disposing of the question said:

The petitioner is engaged in a harmless and beneficial business. As part of his 'property' in that business are the services that he renders in obtaining employment for those seeking it. It is not compulsory upon any one to employ him, and who seeks to avail himself of his services is at liberty to reject them if the terms of the contract for compensation are not satisfactory to him. This right of contract common to the followers of all legitimate vocations is an asset of the petitioner in his chosen occupation, and, as has been said, is a part of the property in the enjoyment of which he is guaranteed protection by the constitution. By the act in question he is arbitrarily stripped of this right of contract, and deprived of his property, and left, in following his vocation and in pursuit of his livelihood, circumscribed and hampered by a law not applicable to his fellow men in other occupations. Such legislation is of the class discussed by Judge Cooley in the paragraph above quoted, 'entirely arbitrary in its character, and restricting the rights, privileges, or legal capacities' of one class of citizens 'in a manner before unknown to the law.' For such legislation, as he very justly adds, those who claim its validity should be able to show a specific authority therefor, 'instead of calling upon others to show how and where the authority is negative.'" (Ex Parte Dickey, 144 Cal. 234.)

The supreme court of the United States in Adkins vs. Children's Hospital, 43 Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 394, made an exhaustive review of the authorities touching the right to contract about one's affairs, including the right to make contracts of employment, and held that such a right was a part of the liberty of the individual which is protected by the fifth amendment to the constitution of the United States. The question under consideration was whether congress had the constitutional power to fix standards and minimum wages for women and children engaged in any occupation within the District of Columbia. Its conclusion was that the act in question passed the limits prescribed by the constitution and was therefore invalid. Surely, the reasons which may be advanced for establishing standards of minimum wages for women and children are not less potential than those which may be urged in favor of the validity of the act before us.

The same arguments made for and against the validity of the act in the instant case were made in the Adkins case and the conclusion there reached was the result of a very full and deliberate consideration of the many authorities which have been cited in the case at bar. The question being a Federal one, the decision of the highest court of the country on the subject is conclusive on us even if we found ourselves without a precedent within our own jurisdiction.

Upon the authority of the cases cited and a long list of others referred to therein, we are of the opinion that the statute in question is invalid and that the prisoner is entitled to his discharge.

Ordered that the prisoner be discharged.

The Economic Argument in Support of the Ten Per Cent Law.

So much for the history of the action and the court decisions. In the following pages are presented statistics and economic arguments submitted by the statistician of the Bureau of Labor Statistics on behalf of the Labor Commissioner in support of the law in question. The data presented were included in the transcript of proceedings which was also submitted as evidence to the Supreme Court.

In the tables which follow, only those agencies have been included for which comparable data had been secured by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. In some instances, several schedules of both commercial and teachers' agencies were excluded from the tabulations presented below for the reason that they were incomplete. Regardless of this fact, it can be safely asserted that the data presented are representative and the conclusions drawn are warranted.

Number of Teachers' and Commercial Agencies.

Table 30, following shows the increase in the number of private employment agencies in the State of California from 1914 to 1922.

*In the following tables the years refer to "employment agency years," from April 1 to March 31.

An analysis of this table shows:

1. That while the total number of private employment agencies in the State of California licensed by the Bureau of Labor Statistics has decreased from 1914 to 1922, the number of commercial, hotel, teachers', and theatrical agencies has increased during the same period.

2. The largest gain in the number of private employment agencies in the state is shown by commercial and teachers' agencies.

(a) From 1914 to 1922, the number of commercial agencies increased from 20 to 56, an increase of 36, or 180 per cent.

(b) From 1914 to 1922, the number of teachers' agencies increased from 6 to 14, an increase of 8 or 133 per cent.

The decline in the number of general and domestic agencies is attributable to the fact that the state government created the free public employment system in 1915. The public employment offices of the state have been furnishing the same kind of help to the employers as have the private general and domestic agencies. The number of commercial placements made by the state free employment offices is relatively small and is insignificant as a factor in competition with the private commercial employment offices. The business of furnishing positions to teachers is still in the hands of private employment agencies. Although there exists in this state a teachers' cooperative agency, the placements effected by this agency are relatively few.

Total Fees Collected by Teachers' and Commercial Employment Agencies.

In the preceding table it was shown that the commercial and teachers' agencies have increased in greater proportion than have other private employment agencies in the State of California. That the cause of this growth is not attributable to the inability of the agencies to handle all of the business of placing clerks and teachers will be shown in the subsequent pages of this report. It appears more probable that the increase in the number of commercial and teachers' agencies is accounted for by the relative profitableness of this business. Thus, the following table (Table 31), shows that the average total fees collected by private teachers' and commercial agencies in 1921 and 1922 were greater than the average total fees collected by other private employment agencies in this state.

A careful perusal of this table reveals the following facts concerning the total fees collected by commercial and teachers' agencies during 1920-1921 and 1921-1922:

1. The teachers' agencies collected the highest total average fees both during the years 1920-1921 and 1921-1922.

2. The commercial agencies collected the next highest average fees during the year 1920-1921. During the year 1921-1922, the commercial agencies ranked third as regards the highest average total fees collected.

3. In 1920-1921, commercial agencies were about 20.8 per cent of all private employment agencies, but they collected about 33.5 per cent of all the fees collected by private employment agencies. In the same year, teachers' agencies were about 5.2 per cent of all private employment agencies, but they collected about 10.2 per cent of all the fees collected.

4. In 1921-1922, commercial agencies were about 23.4 per cent of all private employment agencies, but they collected about 28.8 per cent of all the fees collected by private employment agencies. In the same year teachers' agencies were about 5.4 of all private employment agencies, but they collected about 11.5 of all the fees collected.

The Fees Charged by Teachers' Employment Agencies are Virtually Uniform.

It was shown that the teachers' employment agencies collect the highest average total fees per annum. It was also shown that the number of teachers' agencies in this state has grown considerably since 1914. The data presented in the next table (Table 32) show that the fees charged by the teachers' agencies are fixed and vary but little with the several agencies.

TABLE 32—Fees Charged by Teachers' Agencies in California.

Of the eleven agencies listed in this table, at least nine charge five per cent of the first year's salary. Of three other agencies listed, the Teachers' Cooperative Agency charges 4½ per cent, the Coddington Teachers' Agency charges 5½ per cent, and the Boynton Teachers' Agency, 5 to 7 per cent. Seven per cent is charged for part-time jobs. The same rigidity as regards the fees charged does not exist in the case of other agencies. The uniform fee of five per cent of the first year's salary generally charged by teachers' agencies appears to be an inducement for a number of small agencies to stay in the business and to collect whatever fees they can from the positions they are able to furnish.

There Are Apparently Too Many Teachers' Agencies in the State.

In the table next exhibited (Table 33) are presented figures showing the distribution of positions furnished and fees collected by each of nine teachers' agencies in the state. Only nine agencies are included because no comparable data for the other agencies are available at this time. In this table, however, are included the largest agencies in the state.

The significant facts shown in Table 33, briefly stated, are these:

1. Of the nine agencies for which information is shown, three agencies have furnished, in 1921-1922, only ten per cent of the 1793 positions furnished to teachers by the nine agencies. These three agencies have also collected ten per cent of the total fees collected by the nine agencies. This fact is significant because it shows that the small agencies, though doing very little business, are able, on account of the uniform fees, to secure their proportionate share of the total fees collected by the agencies doing more business. It appears that on account of the prevailing fee of five per cent of the first year's salary, it is profitable for the small agency to stay in the business. It is reasonable to believe that if the fee were not as high, it would not pay for the small agency, with probably much larger overhead expenses, to remain in the business.

2. In 1921-1922, the A, D and F agencies in Los Angeles and the E and G agencies in Berkeley handled eighty-four per cent of the 1793 teachers' placements in that year. If the ten per cent law were upheld by the courts, it would have probably resulted in the elimination of the small agencies and in more placements and business for the larger agencies.

A Smaller Number of Teachers' Agencies Could Readily Handle All Placements of Teachers.

It was shown in the preceding table that a small number of agencies furnish the largest percentage of jobs. Table 34 shows that most teachers' positions are furnished during the months of June, July, August and September. In these four months, eight teachers' agencies supplied fifty-eight per cent of the 1481 positions they furnished to teachers in 1921-1922. Forty-two per cent of the positions were furnished by the same eight agencies during the remaining eight months of the year. It appears clear that during the eight months most of the teachers' agencies have little placement work to do and that fewer agencies could accomplish the work done by all of the agencies during these slack months. Even during the busy months of June, July, August and September, it is quite probable, judged by the placements of each agency separately, that fewer agencies could do the work of all of the present agencies.

The reduction in the number of teachers' agencies would result in the elimination of much of the idle and expensive time during the eight slack months of the year, during which little placement work is done by teachers' agencies. The elimination of this expensive time would no doubt enable the teachers' agencies to operate on smaller fees.

Teachers Pay for Their Jobs on the Instalment Plan.

That five per cent of the first year's salary is too high a charge for securing positions is suggested by the fact that teachers generally pay for their jobs on the instalment plan. Complete data regarding the method of payment for teachers' positions are available only for two agencies for the year 1922-1923. Table VI shows the percentage distribution of the fees charged and the fees collected by these agencies, by months. The term fees charged shows what these two agencies have charged to teachers to whom positions were furnished, while the term fees collected shows what these agencies have actually collected each month.

It will be observed that during the four months of June, July, August, and September, seventy-five per cent of the total fees were charged, while only twenty-two per cent of the total fees were collected. In the four months following, from October to January, fifty-six per cent of the fees were collected. The teacher must be on his job several months before he is able to pay for it. If the cost of the job were more reasonable, as was intended by the ten per cent law, it would probably be possible for the teachers to pay for the job upon its receipt, or in less time than at present. This, in turn, would lessen the teachers' agencies' overhead expenses and would enable them to operate on a lower fee.

Fees Charged by Commercial Agencies Vary from Ten to Fifty Per Cent of the First Month's Salary.

Unlike the fees of the teachers' agencies, the fees of the commercial agencies vary considerably with the agency. Although the prevailing fee fluctuates about twenty-five per cent of the first month's salary, many commercial agencies charge considerably less or more than this amount. Table 36, following, shows the fees charged by thirty-three commercial agencies. It will be observed from this table that only five agencies charge a flat percentage of twenty-five per cent. The fees charged by the other agencies vary with the rapidity with which the clerk is able to pay the fee. Thus, in some instances, the fee is only twenty-five per cent for the same job if the clerk is able to pay cash for it, but if the clerk is obliged to pay for the job on the instalment plan, he is called upon to pay fifty per cent of his first month's salary.

It is important to observe that it is often the largest agency which charges the highest fee. The nature of the business is such that the purchaser of the commodity is compelled to pay whatever price the seller asks. The jobless man or woman is not in a position to bargain for the services of the employment agency. The only alternative which faces the purchaser of the job is often starvation—a fact which compels him to buy the job at whatever price the agency is willing to take.

The fact (Table 36) that some agencies charge 10 per cent of the first month's salary, while others charge 33.3 or 50 per cent of the first month's salary, seems to show that the business can be conducted on either basis and that the highest fee charged is not essential to the profitable conduct of the business.

This will be shown in detail below.

The Community Placement Bureau, Inc., Is Operated Successfully on Ten Per Cent.

The Community Placement Bureau, Inc., was organized in 1920. It developed partly as a result of the feeling that the existing commercial agencies were charging too high fees and that the "white collar" worker was entitled to protection from these exorbitant fees. During the first two years of its existence, the Community Placement Bureau operated at a deficit but since 1922 it has been making a profit every year. The reasons for the unprofitable operations during the first two years of its existence are ascribable to the requirements of promotion and to the fact that the Bureau was started during a period of industrial depression. In a subsequent table (Table 40), it will be shown that the Community Placement Bureau does about eighteen per cent of the total business of the San Francisco commercial employment agencies. In tables 37 and 38, next presented, are incorporated facts bearing upon the business operation of the Community Placement Bureau, Inc.

An examination of Table VIII shows:

1. That during the first seven months of 1923, the Community Placement Bureau, Inc., had an average profit per placement of $1.04.

2. That the larger the number of positions furnished per month the larger the gain per position. It follows from this observation that with increased business an employment agency could operate more profitably. This, of course, holds true of most business enterprises.

Table 38 shows the percentage distribution of the expenses of the Community Placement Bureau, Inc. The table is presented because it is often contended by private employment agencies that the cost of advertising is a very heavy burden upon the agencies and that this burden makes deep inroads upon the fees collected by them. It will be seen from this table that, as a matter of fact, the expenditures for advertising of the Community Placement Bureau were only 18.52 per cent for the year ending December 31, 1922, and 21.34 per cent for the seven months ending July 31, 1923. It will be observed further that salaries constitute about fifty per cent of the total expenses. The low expenditure for insurance indicates a small investment of physical property. The business of the commercial agency (and the same is true of all employment agencies) requires little investment of capital. No expensive machines and equipment are needed to start an employment agency. Maintenance of the office, salaries, and advertising are the principal items of expense.

There Are Too Many Commercial Agencies.

Table 30, above, shows that from 1914 to 1922, teachers' employment agencies increased 133 per cent and commercial employment agencies increased 180 per cent. These percentage increases are phenomenal and are to be accounted for by no other circumstance than the relative profitability of the business. It will be seen from tables 39 and 40 that there are apparently too many commercial agencies, considering the number of positions they fill. In studying these tables, it should be remembered that the larger number of positions the commercial agency can handle, the greater would be its gain per position. This applies not only to any particular month as in the case of the Community Placement Bureau, Inc., but it applies equally to the total annual business of any agency.

Table 39 shows that in 1921-1922, seventeen commercial employment agencies furnished 11,225 jobs. Of these seventeen agencies, three agencies furnished 6125 jobs. In other words, eighteen per cent of the agencies furnished fifty-five per cent of the jobs, eighty-two per cent of the agencies furnished only forty-five per cent of the jobs. It is obvious that the operating expenses of the larger number of agencies furnishing the smaller number of jobs must be proportionately much higher than the operating expenses of the few agencies which handle the bulk of the jobs. If compelled to operate on ten per cent, it is quite probable that the highest cost agencies, having the largest overhead expenses, would be compelled either to liquidate or to engage in other activities to make up for losses due to idle time. It appears certain that with the limitation of the fee to ten per cent, the inducement to enter the business, heretofore so pronounced, would receive a decided check. Had the new law resulted in the elimination of the smaller commercial agencies, it would, of course, as already pointed out above, result in more business by the larger agencies.

Table 40 shows similar facts for San Francisco commercial agencies. Here, too, the largest proportion of business is done by few agencies. The rest "hang on" and get what profits they can from the relatively few placements they can manage to make.

It is both interesting and instructive to note that agency XXV furnished, in 1921-1922, eighteen per cent of the total placements, while agency XXVIII furnished twenty-five per cent of the total placements. The latter agency often charges as high as fifty per cent of the first month's salary, while the former charges only ten per cent. The former operates at a substantial profit; the profits of the latter agency are considerably higher.

The fact that agency XXVIII can get a large number of applicants for employment in spite of its high charges and in the face of the existence, in the same city, of an agency charging only ten per cent, illustrates the nature of the business. It proves that the applicant for employment will go for the job wherever he can get it, regardless of the charges imposed upon him for the job. If agency XXVIII can, by virtue of its business methods, secure a large number of opportunities of employment, it is also in a position to charge for these opportunities as much as it deems fit. The company knows that the applicant for the job is usually not in a position to wait for it, and that consequently he will pay what he is asked for it, especially if he is given the chance of paying for the job on the instalment plan. It appears that in no other business would it be possible to charge for relatively the same commodity so different a price. Probably only in a business which deals in the means of livelihood can such divergent prices exist at the same place and time.

Conclusion.

Although the California Supreme Court has definitely decided that employment agencies may charge what they will for the jobs which they sell to applicants for employment, the agitation which preceded the enactment of the ten per cent law has put the high fee charging employment agency in general disfavor. Employers of labor, especially the larger employers, now show an increased disposition to patronize the smaller fee agencies, a number of which have sprung up since the enactment of the ten per cent law. On the other hand, several commercial employment agencies, emboldened by the Supreme Court decision, have, since the setting aside of the ten per cent law, increased their fees.

While it is now settled law in California that private employment agencies may make whatever contracts they wish with applicants for employment, public disapproval of exorbitant fees as well as competitive conditions among private employment agencies is likely to work as a continued deterrent toward general increases in fees now charged.

The California Supreme Court has settled for a long time to come the question of limiting fees charged by private employment agencies. The decision of this court, however, has not done away with the economic reasons which point to the need of lower fees in the interests of the workers engaged in clerical occupations. Greater publicity regarding the fees charged by some commercial agencies would probably tend to reduce these fees. Since employers generally disapprove of the high-fee-charging employment agencies, these agencies should be compelled to state to employers the amount of the fees which they exact, as such procedure might lead to more reasonable fees.

TRADE AND MOVIE SCHOOLS.

In January, 1924, the bureau began a special investigation of trade schools in the cities of San Francisco, Oakland, and Los Angeles. This investigation was begun because of the numerous complaints which the several district offices of the bureau had been receiving against alleged misrepresentations and fraudulent practices on the part of certain trade schools. These complaints were directed against schools purporting to teach millinery work, chocolate dipping, embroidery work, etc., as well as such trades as plastering, bricklaying, plumbing, tile setting, auto mechanics, and other trades. In this investigation and the resulting prosecutions, great care was exercised by the bureau not to injure the business standing of trustworthy trade schools which were conscientiously and honestly endeavoring to qualify their students for one kind of work or another. On the other hand, vigorous action was taken against the counterfeit and spurious types of trade schools, which appeared to be thriving by swindling workers out of their earnings.

Most of the fraudulent schools were advertising extensively in the daily newspapers promising to teach various trades in about six or eight weeks for tuition fees ranging from $50 to $250. In addition to offering rapid courses for fancy sums, these schools were also promising lucrative jobs to prospective students. The following advertisement, which appeared in more than a dozen newspapers in neighboring states, is typical of the trade schools in question:

WE PAY RAILROAD FARE TO CALIFORNIA. Special offer to all men enrolling. Complete garage course before January 15, 1924. Overhauling season just starting. Good jobs now open. We operate free employment bureaus. We teach plastering and bricklaying.

To those who answered these advertisements were sent circular letters describing the future of plasterers and bricklayers, in glowing terms. The following is an excerpt from one of these circulars:

We also teach plastering and bricklaying. We were requested to teach these trades by the contractors who were having much difficulty in securing capable men. Our students are taken off our hands just as soon as we graduate them and the supply does not begin to fill the demand. These two trades have a scale of $12 per day, year round employment. The tuition for plastering is $150; for bricklaying, $100 and the two courses combined, $200. However, owing to the conditions under which we are conducting these classes, it is impossible for us to offer you refund of fare on plastering and bricklaying.

Perhaps the best way to describe the operations of the so-called trade schools is to cite a typical complaint which was filed at the Los Angeles district office of the bureau. With the exception of the names and addresses, which are omitted, the following are the statements of a boy, sixteen years of age, and of his mother. This boy, as will be seen, sought to learn the plumbing trade and succeeded merely in being cheated out of his $50 liberty bond, which he had saved by selling newspapers. In addition, his mother was also compelled to borrow $50, so as to pay to a "plumbing school" $100 for her son's "plumbing course." The statements below were sworn to before a deputy city prosecutor of Los Angeles on November 28, 1923, and were later referred to the bureau for investigation:

Statement of Complainant:

My name is M----- H-----; I live at-----; was 16 years of age June 15, 1923. I made application to the L----- P----- and T----- School; A. W. B----- runs it; it is located at ----- Street. I enrolled in this school about the latter part of August, 1923; paid a fee of $100. He promised me a job and said I would be a journeyman plumber in about 6 weeks from the time I enrolled. Said I would get $9 a day. He promised me a job after I got my license. I went to the school and he taught me how to draw plans; he had a plan to instruct us from; he had some little blue prints which were plans to copy from. He had a small room. I wiped joints and fastened some pipes together. He said it would not be hard for me to take and pass the city examination for plumber, because some of the other boys had taken this examination and passed; said it was easy. He told me when I took the examination I should put my age down as 19 years, and that I served an apprenticeship for 3 years, and served 8 months as a journeyman at Homedale, Idaho, and Mountain Home, Idaho. I have never been at either place. These names of places and these instructions were given me by Mr. B-----'s son, who is a teacher in the school. I secured a license on these statements and went back there and asked for a job, and he told me he could not get everybody a job, and if somebody came there and wanted a plumber, he would tell me. I did not go back then for about 3 or 4 days, and when I did go back he had a sign up which read "No loafing around" and told me I would never get a job sitting around there, but would have to go and look for one.

Statement of F----- J. H-----:

My name is F----- J. H-----, and I live at -----, Maywood Station. I am the mother of M----- H-----, M----- was 16 years old on June 15, 1923. About the last part of August, 1923, M----- was looking for work and came home and asked me if I would let him start to learn the plumbing business, and I told him he could. I asked him to find out all the particulars about it. The next day he came in and told me it would be $100 and that he could learn the trade in a few weeks and then get from $7 to $9 a day, through a plumbing school, where he was to go to learn the trade, at ----- Street, Los Angeles, run by A. W. B-----. The boy had a $50 Liberty Bond which he had saved up by selling newspapers. He cashed that and brought it to the school, telling the teacher, Mr. B-----, that he was an orphan and he did not have but $100 to start out with. Mr. B-----, the teacher, was satisfied as long as he would get the balance of the money at the time the boy got his license. One time I had borrowed $25 to pay him, and then he was after me for more money, and I at one time borrowed $10, and the last $15 was given after the boy got his license, so in all he got $100. Now the boy did not get a job, and I thought I would go down myself and find out conditions. I went down and asked him would he please tell me about the plumbing school; that I had a boy about 19 years old who was working in an office and wanted to be in the open air, and decided to be a plumber. Would he please give me all the information regarding that trade. He told me it would cost $100, and it is a matter as to how bright the boy would be. That a boy would generally get his license and graduate in about three weeks, and some boys in less time than that, and the work would pay them from $7 to $9 a day. Then he brought some newspapers out and opened them, and showed me some skyscrapers that were going up, and told me that the plumbers could always find work; that there was a big demand for plumbers. I then laughed and asked him if the city of Los Angeles was waiting for him to graduate plumbers to do the plumbing work in these big buildings. Then I asked him when they would get their license—does he supply them with a job as a starter, and he said "Why of course we do; we start them out but can not state how long they will work on the job, but we give them the first job." Then I told him I had a boy who got his license in his school, and when he asked for a job he showed him the sign that he had put up there "No loafing around," and would not give him a job, and for him to go out and look for one.

The impositions of the type of trade schools described in the statements just quoted were practiced not only upon persons seeking to learn trades, but also upon the public in general. Thus, for instance, in San Francisco, the investigation revealed a plastering school which would send out apprentices, just beginning to learn the trade, as competent craftsmen to do the plastering work on private homes then under construction. The method followed by this plastering school was this: The owner of the so-called trade school was advertising daily for men to learn the plastering trade. The men who applied were promised employment for from three to six dollars per day within a few days after enrollment in the course, the fee for the course being $150. In every case, the owner of the school attempted to get the $150 in advance, although, where this was impossible because of the applicant's lack of funds, a part payment was accepted and for the remainder of the fee a note was taken. The owner of this plastering school, in addition to being the instructor of his school, was also engaged in taking contracts for plastering jobs. On these contracts he would send out his green pupils under the supervision of one plasterer, instructing them not to tell the owner of the house that they were merely learners. The method of the owner of this fake trade school was to deduct twenty per cent of the estimated cost of the job as his own compensation, then he would pay the one mechanic and for the materials used on the job. If anything was left from the contract price, he divided it among the learners. Perhaps if he were able to pay his learners according to his promises, he would be able to continue his fraudulent practices indefinitely. But it happened too frequently that nothing was left of the contract price wherewith to pay the pupils, who became much dissatisfied and had filed complaints with the labor commissioner. Moreover, the owner of this school was enrolling pupils faster than he could get plastering contracts, and he soon found himself unable to live up to his promise of furnishing jobs within a few days after enrollment in his course. The investigations of the bureau into the business methods of this school compelled its discontinuance.

In San Francisco and Oakland the bureau discovered six fake trade schools, all of which were compelled to liquidate their businesses in consequence of the bureau's prosecutions. Other trade schools, which have remained in the business, were obliged to modify their methods of securing students. The chief concern of the bureau in connection with these trade schools was that promises of jobs should not be offered as inducements to prospective students unless these trade schools were licensed and could fulfill their promises.

As a result of the bureau's activities in this connection, there came to light in addition to building trades schools, a large number of other schools, such as sewing schools, chocolate and dipping schools, embroidery schools, millinery schools, beauty schools, and movie schools. While not all of the kinds of schools enumerated were found to be dishonest, most of the schools investigated were found to be depending for their existence largely upon the effectiveness of their advertisements and the gullibility of their prospective students.

Because of the inadequate legislation regarding trade schools, the Bureau encountered considerable difficulties in its efforts to stamp out irresponsible trade school enterprises. The Trade School Act (approved May 24, 1919, Stats. 1919, p. 825) reads as follows:

Section 1. Any person, firm, association, or corporation who conducts for gain any trade school or classes of instruction for the teaching in whole or in part of any trade, art, science, or occupation requiring special skill, and who, for gain or hire furnishes or agrees to furnish in connection therewith facilities or information to pupils and employers of labor whereby the labor or services of any such pupils are engaged to be employed in the trade, art, science or occupation thus taught at stipulated wages or other valuable consideration, shall be held to conduct a private employment agency and be subject to all the laws and regulations governing such agencies.

Sec. 2. Nothing contained in this act shall apply to trade schools or classes of instruction conducted by or in connection with any public school, public institution, parochial school, charitable school or institution, private business schools teaching shorthand, typewriting, bookkeeping, mechanical and other usual business subjects or trades schools connected therewith or any school employing teachers having certificates issued by the public school authorities to teach any particular trade, art, science or occupation.

Under section 1 of this act, it appears that one may conduct a trade school and an employment agency in the same place of business without taking out an employment agency license, if no separate fee is taken from either the pupil or the employer for furnishing employment or information leading to employment. The trade schools which were found to be making false promises of employment as a condition of enrollment claimed that they were taking money only for the course of instruction, while the promise of a job was made without any compensation. The Labor Commissioner, on the other hand, held that if the promise of a job was made as a condition of enrollment, and before the money was paid for the course, the enrolling student, in effect was paying for the promise of securing a job as well as for the course, and that, therefore, the trade schools which were promising jobs at the time of enrollment were violating the trade school act by not taking out employment agency licenses. It was not the intention of the bureau to license trade schools—rather was it its intention to prevent trade schools from making false promises of employment in order to secure the enrollment of pupils for the several courses.

In addition to the difficulties encountered under Section 1 of the act above quoted because of its failure to indicate whether or not the "gain or hire" must be separate and distinct from the tuition, the bureau encountered further difficulties under section 2 of the act which seems to exempt from the operation of the act "private business schools teaching shorthand, typewriting, bookkeeping, mechanical and other usual business subjects."

The following rulings, as applied to trade schools, were made by the Labor Commissioner:

1. A trade-school which does not agree to furnish employment to its students does not need an employment agency license, and it is not to receive any license from the bureau.

2. A trade-school which does agree to furnish employment to students is an employment agency and must take out an employment agency license. It must also be governed by the provisions of the employment agency act, particularly by the provisions of the act which prohibit:

- (a) The acceptance of a registration fee, directly or indirectly, without furnishing employment at the time of accepting the fee:
- (b) Making false promises of employment.

NOTE.—If a trade school becomes an employment agency by agreeing to furnish employment and takes out a license, it must fulfil promises of employment it makes to every student. Such a trade-school employment agency must not accept any fee in advance of furnishing work to its students.

3. A trade-school which does not make promises of employment or which does not agree to furnish employment is not entitled to an employment agency license.

4. A trade-school, such as a needle trades school or a beauty parlor school, is governed by the rules mentioned above. In addition, such trade-schools are prohibited from selling their product on the market. If they do so, they must refrain from charging a tuition fee and must, in addition, pay their student apprentices the regular apprentice rates, prescribed by the Industrial Welfare Commission. The same applies to the services of students for which a price is charged to customers or patrons in beauty shops.

Movie Make-up Schools.

In Los Angeles, the bureau's investigation of trade schools was largely centered about the so-called "movie make-up school," which was merely another specimen of fraudulent trade schools. In practically every case, the complainants against these schools had been promised, and even verbally guaranteed, employment upon the screen. The complainants were mostly unemployed men and women who were looking for work. In some cases the victims of these unscrupulous schools were mothers who tried to get their children into the movies, with the hope of making Jackie Coogans out of them. The following is a brief description of the types of schools covered in the bureau's investigation, as well as of the methods which were employed by these schools in defrauding their victims.

At the time of its investigation the bureau discovered four types of schools, namely:

1. The straight movie make-up school.
2. The movie school club.
3. The screen test school, and,
4. The "cooperative" screen test plan.

(1) The movie make-up school offered to teach the prospective movie employee the art of making up for the screen. Ordinarily, the course of make-up offered consisted of from one to twelve lessons, depending upon the school and the credulity of the individual enlisted as pupil.

(2) The second type of school offered the applicant for employment in the movies membership in a fictitious club of motion picture artists, thereby leading the applicant for employment to believe that he or she was well on the road to screen fame. These so-called clubs were having, from time to time, social gatherings at which the members were shown how to put grease and paint on their faces and were lead to believe that by keeping up their membership in the club they were qualifying themselves as screen artists.

(3) The screen test school offered the applicant for employment approximately between twenty and thirty feet of film for the sum of about $30. This type of school promised the applicant "free" instruction in make-up; so that the applicant would photograph well on the screen, which was supposed to prove to his advantage in seeking employment at the studios.

(4) The "cooperative" screen test plan offered the applicant a position as a star in a planned production if the applicant would pay anywhere between $100 to $1000, or more, for joining the cooperative enterprise, which was supposed to be organized for the purpose of making motion pictures. The applicant was told that he would be taught how to act in the movies if he would invest his money in the "cooperative."

Methods Employed by Movie Schools.

The methods employed by these movie schools in securing applicants were about the same.

1. False Advertising. These schools secured their prospects by inserting misleading advertisements. In the "help wanted" columns of the newspapers, especially in the "female help wanted" columns, the make-up schools advertised as follows:

"WANTED AT ONCE—Men and women all ages, neatly dressed, to register for MOTION PICTURES. Experience NOT REQUIRED. (Make-up taught if necessary.) NO REGISTRATION FEE. Apply 643 South Olive St. See Casting Director."

"WANTED—50 MEN AND WOMEN for motion pictures. New productions now being made. If you have talent and care to get on the screen, see Casting Director. 1171 Market St."

"STUDIO—Screen talent enterprises wants IMMEDIATELY MEN AND WOMEN all AGES, neatly dressed to list for motion pictures. Experience not required. No registration fee. Apply 520 South Broadway."

Many other advertisements of similar nature could be cited, all seeming to convey the impression that the motion picture industry was very short of inexperienced help and that every motion picture producing company in Hollywood was eagerly awaiting the opportunity of offering jobs to "men and women of all ages."

2. Excellent types. The unsophisticated men and women, boys and girls, who responded to these calls for help were told by the "casting directors" of these tricky concerns that they, the applicants, were just the types needed by motion picture producers and that a course of training in the art of make-up would lead them to screen fame. The "courses" in make-up which these movie schools offered consisted in showing the film aspirants, in a few perfunctory lessons, how to apply rouge and powder to their faces. Many of the girls who complained about the false promises of jobs made by these movie schools in connection with the sale of their make-up courses averred that they were practicing the sort of make-up taught by these schools even before they were out of their teens.

3. Splitting of fees with photographers and cosmetic shops. These schools were not only charging as high as $30 for perfectly useless make-up courses, but were also inducing the applicants to buy expensive make-up outfits and to take costly large photographs of themselves. The trick was to send the applicants to certain places, with which the movie schools were in collusion, where they were supposed to get the "right kind" of make-up paraphernalia and to secure the proper "character photographs."

The investigation which the bureau undertook in connection with these movie schools revealed that some of these schools were secretly conniving with private employment agencies. The story of how these make-up schools, in cooperation with certain employment agencies, contrived to defraud applicants for screen employment is too long to tell in detail in this report. Suffice it to say, that as a result of our investigations and prosecutions, seven of these vicious schools were compelled to liquidate their nefarious businesses; while the employment agency licenses of three motion picture agencies were revoked.

In the prosecution of these fake make-up schools and employment agencies in Los Angeles, the bureau had the hearty cooperation of the police department, the Better Business Bureau, the Association of Motion Picture Producers, and the press of that city.

CHILD LABOR IN CALIFORNIA.

In the latter part of March, 1924, the bureau began an investigation of child labor conditions in the State, particularly with reference to the employment of minors on the land. The immediate cause of the bureau's investigation were widely circulated newspaper statements in California and elsewhere to the effect that thousands of children were being ruthlessly exploited in the harvesting of California crops.* The purposes of the bureau's inquiry were:

First—To ascertain the facts regarding the extent of child labor in agriculture.

Second—To prosecute all violations of the child labor law, and Third—To determine what, if any, additional legislation is needed for the protection of child workers and the curtailment of their employment.

Counties and Crops Covered in the Investigation.

Because of its limited resources, sufficient field workers were not available to cover every crop where children might be employed. However, the following principal agricultural and horticultural crops were covered in the counties mentioned during the bureau's investigation:

Crops	Counties
1. Asparagus	Sacramento, Solano and San Joaquin.
2. Apricots	Alameda, Riverside, Santa Clara and Ventura.
3. Cherries	Placer, San Joaquin, Santa Clara, and Solano.
4. Cotton	Imperial, Fresno, Kern and Kings.
5. Grapes (Wine and Raisin)	Fresno, Los Angeles, Napa, San Bernardino, San Joaquin, Sonoma, and Tulare.
6. Peaches	Fresno, Los Angeles, Merced, Placer, San Bernardino, and Tulare.
7. Prunes	Napa, Santa Clara, Solano, Sonoma, and Tulare.
8. Walnuts	Los Angeles, Orange, Santa Barbara, and Ventura.

The counties visited by the bureau's investigators, as will be noticed, were those in which the several crops mentioned are produced in the largest quantities. An effort was made to investigate all of the crops in which children are known to be employed. In most counties visited, the bureau's investigators were accompanied by the supervisors of school attendance of the respective counties. The cooperation of the Commissioner of Immigration and Housing was also secured in this investigation.

Summary Findings and Recommendations.

1. During the summer school vacation migratory families, mostly Mexicans, and their children are employed in the harvesting of our crops. The children are used mostly in the picking of grapes, prunes, cotton and walnuts.

2. The principal crops harvested during the time schools are in session are asparagus, cotton, and walnuts. Many children were found employed in the cotton fields of the Imperial Valley and of Fresno County, in violation of the compulsory education and child labor laws.

3. During its investigation of, and drive against, child labor, the agents of the Bureau of Labor Statistics started sixty criminal prosecutions against various violators of the child labor laws.

*The published newspaper reports concerning child labor exploitation in California were based upon two articles by Arthur Gleason published in the February and March, 1924, issues of the Hearst International.

4. The better enforcement of the compulsory education act, which means also the better enforcement of the child labor law, requires the inauguration of a uniform system of school transfers, which does not exist at the present time.

5. At least ten counties, having no county supervisors or attendance officers, should have same in the interests of the children who pick fruit in these counties, and better law enforcements.

6. The children of the itinerant fruit picking families are very much retarded in their school work, largely because of their itinerancy and also because of inadequate law enforcement in some counties.

7. There is urgently needed a more adequate administration of the working permits system, including better record keeping and extended use by school superintendents.

8. The compulsory education act should be so modified as to provide for permits for children under sixteen years of age, desiring to work in agricultural occupations out of school hours, or during the regular or occasional public school holidays and vacations.

9. The child labor law should be so modified as to specifically prohibit the employment of children under sixteen years of age in agricultural occupations during school hours, or prior to school hours.

10. The employment of children under eight years of age for hire should be prohibited by law.

11. Although available statistical data show that the trend of child labor in the State of California has been downward since 1910, there is need for continued and sustained vigilance against violations of the child labor law and the compulsory education law.

12. "The eradication of child labor in agriculture will not come [entirely] through prohibitive enactments; it must be incidental to an extension of the school term, a strict enforcement of adequate compulsory attendance laws, and such a reorganization of the rural school that the child will want to attend and the parent will realize the value of school work."

Child Labor and School Attendance.

Under the California Child Labor Law and the Educational Rights of Children Act, minors under sixteen years of age are permitted to work in agricultural pursuits outside of school hours and when schools are not in session. But during school hours, when schools are in session, children under sixteen years of age must attend school; they may be employed only after securing a permit from the proper school authorities. During vacation periods, minors of any age are permitted by law to work in agricultural pursuits, even without securing a permit.

From what has just been said, it will be seen that school attendance is closely interwoven with the problem of child labor. In the counties where efficient and adequate supervision of school attendance obtains and the compulsory education act is enforced, the children were found at school during school hours and were not employed in the fields.

Children in Asparagus, Cotton, and Walnuts.

Most of the fruit crops, in which children are employed, are being harvested during the summer months when the public schools are not in session. The crops harvested during the time schools are in session are principally asparagus, cotton, and walnuts. The efforts of the Bureau's investigators were therefore concentrated upon the latter three crops and extensive investigations were made to find out whether the children were working in these crops in violation of the law.

Practically all of the asparagus is raised in Sacramento, Contra Costa and Solano counties. In the asparagus fields of these counties, the bureau's investigator did not find any children employed during school hours. Visits were made to Grand, Sherman, Brannan, Andrus, Twitchell, and other islands, with the same satisfactory results. Practically the same conditions were found in the asparagus canneries. In every public school which was visited by the bureau's investigator, accompanied by the county supervisors of attendance, the children were at school. Among the schools visited in the delta region were the Beaver Union school, the Riverside school, the Sherman school, the Isleton school, and the Isleton Migratory school. Numerous other schools were also visited by the bureau's investigators with a view to ascertaining whether the compulsory education act, and ipso facto, the child labor law, were being observed.

The child labor law as well as the compulsory education acts are being well enforced during the asparagus season. The good work of the county supervisors of attendance during the past three years in the asparagus fields is in large measure responsible for the fact that children are not employed in the cutting or canning of asparagus. Another important reason for the absence of child labor upon asparagus is that a few years ago the agents of the Bureau of Labor Statistics arrested and prosecuted a number of employers of children on the asparagus islands. These prosecutions have had a lasting effect. Nothing, however, is fully as effective in the prevention of the employment of children as the establishment of adequate school facilities and the work of efficient supervisors of school attendance. In the asparagus growing regions both of these essential conditions appear to be fulfilled, there being adequate school facilities and efficient school attendance supervision.

What was formerly a saloon is now a school for the children of migratory families. The parents of these families annually come from the bay region to work in the asparagus fields and canneries on the Sacramento River. This improvised school building will be abandoned as soon as the new migratory school building, which is now being erected at Isleton, will be completed.

In the walnut groves of Los Angeles, Orange, and Ventura counties, the bureau's investigators did not find the same general satisfactory conditions as in the asparagus fields. In several school districts of Los Angeles County there are no special supervisors of attendance; so that the children are not prevented from working during school hours. However, few children are kept out of school in this county for the reason that the number of uncared for districts in the county is small and that adequate school facilities appear to be available for the children of the itinerant families in the walnut groves. In two of the counties mentioned, Los Angeles and Ventura, the practice of declaring a school vacation in certain districts in order to enable the children to pick walnuts was abandoned during the school year of 1924-1925, according to the statements of the school authorities of these counties.

The bureau's investigators found large numbers of children employed in the cotton fields of the Imperial Valley, as well as around Mendota, in Fresno County. In Imperial County, the bureau's field agents, in cooperation with the county school authorities, secured the arrest and conviction of seventeen cotton growers, lessees, or contractors, who were deemed responsible for the employment of children in the picking of cotton during school hours.

The arrest of four persons charged with the employment of children in the cotton fields in and around Mendota was also secured by the bureau during the latter part of its investigation into child labor conditions on the land. The apparent reasons for the employment of children in the cotton fields of Fresno County were the absence of school facilities and the inadequate school attendance supervision. There is little doubt that these conditions will be remedied next season by the county and State school authorities, as well as by the efforts of the district school board.

In Kern and Kings counties, the cotton growers were found to be fully aware of the requirements of the law; so that no children were discovered in the fields during school hours by the bureau's investigators. In these counties, as in other counties, where schools were provided for the children of the itinerant families and attendance supervision was adequate, the child labor law as well as the compulsory education act were well enforced.

'Children in the Fruit Crops.

While the compulsory school attendance law is generally enforced during the asparagus, walnut, and cotton seasons and the children are not permitted to work in these crops during school time, large numbers of children are working in other fruit crops during the regular vacation periods of the public schools. Children of school age, as well as children under school age, are used in the harvesting of prunes, grapes, apricots, peaches and tomatoes. They are employed in the hoeing of beets and melons, they work in the sugar beets, and they harvest the onions in Coachella Valley. They are employed in the dry yards, cutting apricots and peaches and spreading them upon the drying trays. Since this work is being done while schools are not in session, the children are not employed in violation of the law. In some counties, school districts deliberately adjust their vacation periods so as to permit the children to work in the fruit crops. This has been done in the counties of Colusa, Contra Costa, Fresno, Glenn, Los Angeles, Napa, Orange, San Joaquin, Santa Clara, Solano and Sonoma. In these counties, schools close temporarily during certain fruit crops in order that the children might participate in their harvesting. In other counties schools are closed late in the summer and opened late in the fall to enable the use of the children in fruit picking. In Tulare, for instance, schools in the prune and raisin districts open late and the children are thereby permitted to work in these crops. In Solano County, the Vacaville school starts late on account of the prune crop.

An estimate as to the number of children employed in the harvesting of our fruit crops will be ventured in the subsequent pages of this report. In the meantime, it should be said that the work done by the children in the fields, during vacation periods, did not appear harmful to the bureau's investigators. The children work alongside of their parents, but never as steadily as their parents. Even the adult worker in the fruit is not continuously employed. Weather conditions make work intermittent. Thus in the prunes, for instance, several days of steady work are often followed by a few days of idleness, caused either by weather conditions or by the conditions of the crop. The same situation obtains in the harvesting of most of the agricultural or horticultural crops. Foggy mornings will shorten the hours of the day's work; while rainy days in the cotton season result in several days of idleness, it being impossible to pick cotton on wet days.

Prune pickers in Santa Clara County. The older children pick the prunes: while the younger children imitate their older sisters and brothers both in picking and eating the sweet fruit.

A number of school authorities, who know the children through their daily contact with them, were interviewed by the bureau's investigators with regard to the effect of work in the crops upon the health of the children. The opinions unanimously expressed by those interviewed were that the work in question was not harmful to the health of the youngsters, but that the evils of child labor in agriculture lay in the neglect of the children's education. One teacher of a public school in Los Angeles, most of whose pupils pick fruit in the summer months, was of the opinion that the field work was of decided benefit to the health of the children and that the open air in the fields was a desirable change in the living conditions of these children in the Mexican quarters of Los Angeles.

Children of the Migratory Families.

California fruit crops are moved by itinerant workers, mostly migratory families, who go from crop to crop, carrying with them their worldly belongings. As will be seen in the data presented below, the largest proportion of these families is Mexicans. Bundled and huddled together in cheap and troublesome used autos, these crop workers cover long distances, going where work and wages can be secured. Starting from the Imperial Valley, after the cantaloupes in June, the itinerant Mexican family proceeds either to Riverside, San Bernardino, Los Angeles, or Orange counties to work in the apricots. From either of these counties, the migratory family is likely to go to Ventura to work on the late apricots in the latter part of July. Early in August, these wandering families will often proceed to Fresno to work in the peaches and grapes. When these crops are done, about the middle of October, the itinerant families go to work in the walnuts in Ventura, Orange, and Los Angeles counties; while some of the families remain at Fresno or go to Kern and Kings counties to work in the cotton. The counties of Alameda, Sacramento, Solano, Sonoma, Napa, Yolo and others, seem to draw most of their labor supply from the migratory families around the San Francisco bay region.

The children who work in the harvesting of the crops are mostly the children of these migratory families. In many counties, resident families, old and young, turn out to help pick the fruit. But the children of these resident families do not travel from camp to camp, as do the children of the migratory families, and their education is not neglected as is the education of the little nomadic fruit pickers.

Before the regular school session is over, the migratory families begin moving to the first crops of the season. Thus, in March, the children of the itinerant families are taken out of school and are transported to the asparagus islands, where their parents and older brothers and sisters can asparagus. In Sacramento, Solano, Contra Costa, and San Joaquin counties, these children enter either separate schools or separate school rooms set aside by the school authorities for these traveling youngsters. In the counties just mentioned, the attendance supervisors see to it that the children attend the schools within their counties. The school attendance officers in these and in other counties, however, are handicapped in their work by the absence of a uniform transfer system from county to county. It is true that a large number of children leave school without notifying their teachers; still the probable destination of most of the children of the migratory families could be secured by the local grammar schools and the county supervisor of attendance where the family is moving to could be notified of the incoming children, were the proper uniform system of transfers in vogue. Practically all of the county supervisors of attendance as well as county superintendents of schools interviewed by the bureau's investigators were of the opinion that this uniform system of transfers should come through the State Department of Education.

While the migratory children are taken care of in the counties having county supervisors of school attendance, there are no effective means to compel migratory children to attend school in counties not having such officers. In Butte, Colusa, Marin, Mendocino, Napa, Placer, San Benito, Prune Pickers in Solano County.

San Mateo, Santa Cruz, and Yolo counties there are no county officers specially charged with the duty of enforcing the compulsory education act. The absence of county school supervision is very unfair to the children of the migratory families who pick fruit in these counties. Moreover, the lack of enforcement of the compulsory education law, as applied to the migratory children, in these counties, makes it difficult for the supervisors of attendance of adjacent counties to perform their official duties. In Sacramento and Solano counties, for instance, the work of the attendance supervisors is often hampered by the fact that the migratory families who do not want to send their children to school move to Yolo county where there is no supervision over school attendance of their children. The same conditions also obtain in other counties. Miss Georgiana Carden, state supervisor of school attendance, has been endeavoring to secure county attendance officers for these delinquent counties, and, according to present indications, her efforts will, in all probability, meet with success in the near future.

Nationalities of the Fathers of Migratory Families.

In the fall of 1922, the State Department of Education sent Miss Margaret Shea, under the direction of Miss Georgiana Carden of that department, to canvass a number of migratory fruit picking families with a view to focusing the attention of certain counties upon the migratory family problem and to show the need of special schools for the children of these families. While only 312 families were covered in this canvass, the data secured as a result of it reveal some interesting information. The schedules, which were filled out by Miss Shea, were sorted and tabulated by this bureau's statistician in order to get statistical information concerning the nationalities of these families, the extent of their migrations, and the schooling of their children. Although only 312 family schedules were used in the tables presented below, nevertheless the data appear to be indicative of conditions as they are generally known to exist.

Table 1 shows the nationality of the fathers of 312 fruit picking families in Los Angeles, Napa, Orange, Riverside, Santa Clara, Solano, and Sonoma counties where the canvass was made.

It will be seen that of the total number of 312 families, the largest number, 215, or 68.9 per cent, were Mexican. Spanish families constituted 13.8 per cent of the total; while American families were 9.0 per cent of the 312 families.

The extent of migration of 307 of the 312 families canvassed is shown in Table 2. Only one-quarter of the families said that they were moving to places other than those which they considered their permanent homes. The number of families who said that they were returning home was 211, or 68.7 per cent of the total; while only 19, or 6.2 per cent of the families were found working at home, that is, in places which they considered their permanent residences.

Tables 3 and 4, following, relate to the ages of the children of the migratory families. It will be noticed (Table 3) that while in the rural districts of the State of California, the percentage of children under five years of age was 27.6, among the migratory families the percentage of children of the same age group was only 3.1. Again, in the rural districts of the state, the proportion of children between 5 to 15 years of age was 51.8, whereas, among the migratory families the proportion of children in the same age groups was 82.9. These data seem to show that families do not travel with very small children and that the proportion of children of school age among these families is exceptionally high—a fact which points to the need of sufficient school facilities and adequate attendance supervision.

In Table 4 are presented figures showing the sex, age and distribution of the 808 children of the 312 fruit picking families. (It should be remembered that the total number of children among these families was in excess of 808. This figure represents the number of children of these families for whom age and sex data were secured.) It will be noticed that the number of male children was 418, or 52 per cent of the total, the remaining 390, or 48 per cent being female children. It will be observed further that while there was a somewhat greater proportion of male children over female, the proportions of either sex under 17 years, or of school age, was practically the same, namely, 94.7 of the male children and 94.9 of the female children.

Retardation of the Migratory Children.

The following table (Table 5) shows the educational status of 681 children of the 289 migratory families. The children are classified in this table according to their ages, and their school status. The retardation of the migratory school children is strikingly shown in this table. Thus, for instance, it will be observed that of the children twelve years of age, who would normally be either in the fifth or sixth grades, seventy-seven per cent were under the fifth grade, or retarded. On the other hand, it should be noticed that at least one child of this age group was accelerated. Again, of the children thirteen years of age, who would normally be either in the sixth or seventh grade, only twenty-eight per cent of these children were in these grades; while the remainder were retarded. The fact that some of these children are accelerated, that is, in higher grades than they would normally be, seems to indicate that these children are capable of learning and that lack of opportunity is responsible for the general retardation of these children.

No information was secured on the family schedule regarding the country of birth of these children. It is likely that some of these children were born in Mexico and were retarded on this account rather than because of the itinerancy of their parents. In spite of this probability, there is little doubt but that the children of the migratory families born in this country are also considerably retarded in their schooling.

Arrests and Prosecutions.

During the bureau's survey of child labor, from March to December, 1924, numerous arrests were made and prosecutions started against violators of the child labor law. Altogether as many as sixty arrests were made during this period, including offenders in canneries, cotton fields, dairies, garages, vegetable markets, lumber yards, and in theatres. The number of arrests by counties were as follows:

Alameda County.....	1 arrest
Fresno County.....	4 arrests
Imperial county.....	12 arrests
Los Angeles County.....	5 arrests
Sacramento County.....	2 arrests
San Benito.....	1 arrest
San Diego County.....	15 arrests
San Francisco County.....	13 arrests
Santa Barbara County.....	1 arrest
Santa Clara County.....	1 arrest
Santa Rosa County.....	5 arrests

Of the total number of arrests made by the bureau's investigators during the bureau's drive against the unlawful employment of children, the bureau secured forty convictions. Of the remaining cases, three are still pending, while seventeen were dismissed. The cases dismissed were largely those pertaining to the employment of children on the stage. Some cases were dismissed at the request of the bureau, after assurance was secured that the law would be complied with in the future.

Judging by past experience, these arrests and prosecutions will exercise a favorable and memorable effect upon the future observance of the provisions of the child labor law.

Trend of Child Labor in California.

Little accurate statistical information is available regarding the number of children gainfully employed in California. The best available data are those of the United States Census Bureau. The trend of child labor can be best gauged from the figures gathered by this federal agency. In the following table (Table 6) are shown the number of children 10 to 15 years of age and the number and percentage of increase or decrease in the total child population between 10 to 15 years of age and in the gainfully employed children of the same age group for a period of three decades.

It will be seen that in 1910 compared with 1900, the number of children between 10 to 15 years of age in the State of California increased 38.0 per cent, while the number of gainfully employed children during the same period increased only 20.7 per cent. In 1900 the number of gainfully employed children in California, between 10 to 15 years of age, was, as reported by the U. S. Census, 9319, or 6.1 per cent of the children of this age group. In 1910, the number of gainfully employed children increased to 11,251, but the proportion of gainfully employed declined to 5.4 per cent. In 1920, the Census reported an increase of 45.1 per cent in number of California children, between the ages of 10 to 15, but a decrease of 19.5 per cent in the number of gainfully employed children. Altogether, the Census reported 9057 children gainfully employed in 1920, which represented 3.0 per cent of the total number of children of the age group discussed.

As pointed out by the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor and by the United States Census Bureau, this drop in the number of children gainfully employed is more apparent than real. This marked decrease in the reported number of gainfully employed children, which is shown by the U. S. Census for the entire United States, is attributed largely to a change in the census date from April 15 in 1910 to January 1, in 1920. Since few children are employed in agricultural pursuits in the month of January, the decrease reported is primarily attributable to an understatement of the number of children employed in agriculture. However, as regards the employment of children in other occupations, the decrease shown in 1920 appears to be genuine. There has thus been a considerable decline in the number of gainfully employed children in the State of California between 1910 and 1920, and during the last three decades.

Working Permits.

Under the Educational Rights of Children Act (Stats. 1921, p. 1674), the authority to issue working permits to children under 16 years of age is vested with the superintendents of schools or with other school authorities authorized by the superintendents to issue permits. The number of permits thus issued under the law should constitute a fair index as to the trend of child labor in non-agricultural pursuits.

However, it appears probable that the increase in the number of permits shown in the following tabulation is due to a better administration of the law by the school authorities rather than to an increase in the number of children working.

TABLE 7—Number and Per Cent of Increase in the Working Permits Issued to Minors Under 16 Years of Age, 1920-1921 to 1923-1924.

School years	Number of permits	Increase
		Number	Per cent

1922-23.....	2,688	293	12.2
1923-24.....	2,874	186	6.9

As will be seen in Table 8 presented below, the number of children of 14 and 15 years of age found gainfully employed by the census in 1920, exclusive of children of this age engaged in agriculture, was 5549. Although this number includes occupations requiring no working permits, such as street trade occupations, it is nevertheless obvious that the number of permits issued does not represent the number of children actually working outside of school hours or during school vacations, who should have permits. The number of working permits issued to children of the several age groups for the two latest school years and the number of permits issued by the several counties are shown in Tables 8 and 9 next presented.

It will be seen (Table 8) that the largest number and percentage of permits were issued to children fifteen years of age. The permits issued to children of fourteen and fifteen years of age exempt them from full time school attendance, but not from part-time schooling, where such schools exist. The permits issued to children between fourteen and sixteen years of age are to work out-of-school hours only. No records are obtainable concerning the number of permits issued to minors between twelve and sixteen years of age to work Saturdays and during the regular or specified occasional public school vacations.

The principals of schools are vested with the authority of issuing vacation permits, but no records of vacation permits issued are kept. There is needed a more adequate administration of the vacation working permit system, including their increased use when required by law and a better method of record keeping.

Permits to Children Engaged in Agricultural Pursuits.

It was already pointed out in this report that no permits are required by minors to work on the land, outside of school hours or during regular or occasional public school vacations. This fact makes it all the more difficult to arrive at an estimate as to the number of children working in agriculture. If the compulsory education law were amended so as to provide for agricultural working permits, it would be possible to administer and enforce the compulsory education act more effectively. The minors who would fail to attend school regularly would not be issued permits and would thus be prevented from working in agricultural occupations outside of school hours. Moreover, the issuance of such permits should yield definite information regarding the actual number of children working in agriculture and should also furnish a check upon the hours worked by the youngsters in the field. The law now provides that the number of hours worked by minors, including the hours minors attend school, must not exceed eight in any one day of twenty-four, but this provision does not apply in agricultural pursuits.

If working permits were required and the hours of work were restricted to eight, these permits could specify the number of hours the child is at school and the number of hours the child may work.

Children Under School Age.

In the course of its investigation of child labor on the land, the bureau's investigators found many children under school age who were working in the fields, especially in the picking of prunes and in the cotton fields. In some cases where the children of school age were at school, the bureau's field agents discovered children under eight years of age picking cotton. At the present time, the law does not prohibit the employment of children under eight years of age either before, during, or after school hours. The employment of children under eight years of age should not be permitted. Since they are not required to be at school they are often kept in the fields long hours, helping their parents do their work.

Work Before School Hours.

The employment of children of school age before school hours is permissible under the law, provided their total number of hours of work and schooling combined does not exceed eight in any one day. In many counties, especially in the dairy industry, children are compelled to rise early in the morning, long before sunrise, to work around the dairies. These children come to school tired out and unable to benefit by instruction offered them. This problem is serious in many counties. This practice of working children before school hours can be stopped only through a prohibitive amendment to the child labor law.

With the exception of the amendments to the child labor and the compulsory education laws suggested in this report, the bureau's investigation of child labor on the land leads it to concur heartily with the conclusion reached by the National Child Labor Committee that, " . . . The eradication [of the evil effects] of child labor in agriculture will not come [entirely] through prohibitive enactment; it must be incidental to an extension of the school term, a strict enforcement of adequate compulsory attendance laws, and such a reorganization of the rural school that the child will want to attend and the parent will realize the value of school work."*

*Gertrude H. Folke: Farm Labor vs. School Attendance, Published by the National Child Labor Committee, 1922, p. 14.

Number of Children in Agriculture.

No adequate information is available regarding the number of children engaged in agricultural pursuits. Attention has already been called to the fact that the number of children employed in agriculture in 1920, as reported by the U. S. Census, is understated. However, the census figures furnish the best obtainable information regarding the extent of child labor on the land. The following table (Table 10) shows the trend of child labor in agricultural and non-agricultural pursuits as found by the United States Census Bureau.

TABLE 10—Number and Per Cent of Increase or Decrease (—) in the Gainfully Employed Children 10 to 15 Years of Age in Agricultural and Non-Agricultural Pursuits, 1900-1920.
(Computed from U. S. Census Data.)

Years	Children 10 to 15 years of age
	Agricultural pursuits			Non-agricultural pursuits
	Number	Increase or decrease (—) since preceding decade		Number	Increase or decrease (—) since preceding decade
		Number	Per cent		Number	Per cent
1900.....	1,493			7,826
1910.....	2,840	1,347	90.2	8,411	585	7.4
1920.....	1,832	—1,008	—35.5	7,225	—1,186	—14.1

It will be noticed that while in 1910, the Census reported an increase of 90.2 per cent in the number of children gainfully employed in agricultural pursuits, in 1920, the Census Bureau reported a decrease of 35.5 per cent since the preceding decade. For the reason stated above, the change in data in the census in 1920, the reported decrease is an understatement of fact. The number of children working in agricultural pursuits in 1910 was probably also understated by the Census Bureau, since the census of that year was taken as of the fifteenth of April. It is reasonable to believe that if the census were taken in the month of July, for instance, a larger number of children would be found gainfully employed in agricultural occupations. However, the census figures furnish a basis for an estimate as to the number of children engaged in agriculture.

Table 6 shows that between 1910-1920 there has been an increase of 45.1 per cent in the total number of California children 10 to 15 years of age. There is little likelihood, in view of the general downward trend in the employment of children, that the number of children employed in agriculture increased at the same rate as the total California population of 10 to 15 years. But for the purposes of securing an estimate as to the probable number of children engaged in agriculture in 1920, it may be assumed that the number of children in agricultural occupation from 1910 to 1920 has increased at the same rate as has the total child population in the state between the ages of 10 to 15. Thus, multiplying 2840, the number of children reported engaged in agriculture in 1910, by 45.1 per cent, the resulting product of 4121, probably represents the approximate number of children actually employed in agriculture in the State of California.

The figures gathered by the camp inspectors of the Commission of Immigration and Housing furnish an additional basis for an estimate as to the number of children employed in agriculture. During the calendar year of 1923, the camp inspectors of this Commission found 5604 children under sixteen years of age in all of the fruit and vegetable camps throughout the State. The number of children in camps is, of course, larger than the number of children working, since this number includes children too small to work. Still, the Commission of Immigration and Housing does not cover camps having less than five families. If these camps were included the number of children as shown above would be greater, though not by much.

From these and other rough estimates secured by the bureau's investigators, it appears probable that the number of children engaged in agricultural pursuits at the present time is about 5000.

Number of Children in Other Occupations.

The detailed distribution of children ten to seventeen years of age is shown in Tables 11, 12, and 13. Table 11 shows the percentage distribution of children of both sexes in the various occupations to be as follows:

Occupational groups	Percentage distribution
Manufacturing and mechanical industries.....	28.4
Clerical.....	18.0
Agriculture, forestry, and animal husbandry.....	16.3
Trade.....	15.7
Domestic and personal service.....	8.6
Transportation.....	7.1
Public service.....	3.3
Professional service.....	2.1

Total.....	100.0

In Table 13 are shown the number and percentage distribution of children ten to fifteen years of age in the principal occupational groups. It will be observed that the percentage reported in agriculture in 1910 was 26.9 per cent of the total gainfully employed, compared with 16.3 per cent in 1920, and 16.0 per cent in 1900 (Table 12).

With the increased enforcement of the compulsory education act, including the part-time education law, and of the child labor law, the number of children gainfully employed has probably increased but little during the four years since 1920.

Children on the Stage.

The bureau's investigation of child labor included also a special survey of child labor on the stage, particularly in the city of San Francisco. During March and April, 1924, Mrs. Rhoda K. Rypins was engaged by the bureau as special agent to investigate child labor in the theaters of San Francisco. In Mrs. Rypins' report of her investigations, which was published by the Juvenile Protective Association of San Francisco, the facts concerning the employment of children in the San Francisco theaters are summarized as follows:

1. That over 12 dancing teachers are giving instruction to more than 300 children between the ages of 5 and 15 years in singing and dancing for the commercialized stage.

2. That over 270 children's performances took place in 8 weeks' time (Easter vacation week included) of which forty-five per cent were entirely or partially illegal, involving 443 violations of the child labor law.

3. That 187 different children secured permits to work on the stage, from one to 47 times each, during this period.

4. That at the public performances 162 violations of substitution of children under age for those having permits were known; and that 182 violations by the calling in of extra children without permits in addition to those having permits were found.

5. That the children receive little or no money for their work, and that the dancing teacher not only is paid by the theater for the children's act, but by the parents for teaching these acts to the children.

6. That the dancing and singing and general nature of the performance are not only unchildlike in character, but usually vulgar and objectionable.

7. That many parents are ambitious for stage careers for their children but discover that when they approach the period of adolescence, they are discarded by the dancing teachers as no longer of attractive size and age for the commercial performance.

8. That the situation in regard to children on the stage is aggravated by the fact that use is made of these dancing teachers and their pupils by prominent clubs, lodges, newspapers, municipal officials, and even by one well known social agency.

9. That the Bureau of Labor Statistics is doing its utmost to enforce a totally inadequate law, but is hampered by the police courts of San Francisco, in which, during April, six cases prosecuted for violations of this law were all dismissed.

The recommendations made by the Junvenile Protective Association as a result of this investigation were these:

1. That the community be roused to its obligation to discourage these children's performances for "benefit" and social occasions.
2. That social agencies and school teachers should give special attention to this growing condition which promotes juvenile delinquency.
3. That the child labor law should be amended to provide that
 - (a) No child under sixteen years of age who has not yet finished the eighth grade shall appear on the stage except in "benefit" performances, or as a necessary actor in a legitimate drama;
 - (b) A child under sixteen years of age who has finished the eighth grade should be permitted to appear on the public stage only if his physical condition be shown to be satisfactory and his desire to act be the result of economic need;
 - (c) An appropriation of funds to be used exclusively for the enforcement of this law should be made by the state legislature;
 - (d) A fee for each permit should be charged to reimburse the state for the expense of enforcement of the law.

Summary of the California Child Labor Laws.

The following is an annotated summary of the California child labor laws, including the compulsory education act and the part-time education law. The wording employed in this summary is not that used in the texts of the respective laws. Thus, for instance, section 1 of the child labor law does not read, "No minor under the age of 16 years shall be permitted to work." Instead, this section of the law enumerates certain occupations which do not specifically include agricultural occupations. Again, exception (5) under section 1, states that any minor under the age of 18 must secure a permit to work as actor, actress, etc. This subject is covered in section 5 of the Child Labor Law. This section is ambiguous and should be clarified; moreover, the law should provide a definite age under which no person should be permitted to appear on the stage.

Section 1. No minor under the age of 16 years shall be permitted to work. (Sec. 1, Child Labor Law.)

Minors under 16 years may not work without proper permit.

Exceptions to section 1.

pations.

- (6) No boy under 10 years of age, nor girl under 18 years of age, shall be employed, permitted or suffered to work at any time in or in connection with the street occupation of peddling, bootblacking, the sale or distribution of newspapers, magazines, periodicals or circulars nor in any other occupation pursued in any street or public place; provided, however, that nothing in this section shall be construed to apply to cities whose population is less than twenty-three thousand according to the last federal census. (See Sec. 3½ of the Child Labor Law.)

NOTE.—Under date of June 23, 1923, Attorney General U. S. Webb ruled that theatres and root beer stands are "public places" within the meaning of the law.

School enrollment.
Certificate and permit to work.

NOTE.—Except in agricultural and homemaking occupations the Part-time Educational Law, under which the School Enrollment Certificate and Permit to Work are issued to minors between 16 and 18 years of age, furnishes no exception to section 2, since the four hours per week of part-time education must be included in the eight hours per day or forty-eight hours per week of work. (Sec. 7, Part-time Education.)

Sec. 3. PART II.

STATISTICS OF EMPLOYMENT AND WAGES.

THE CALIFORNIA LABOR MARKET BULLETIN.

In order to be able to furnish intelligent and recent information concerning employment and earnings throughout the State of California, the Bureau of Labor Statistics, in cooperation with the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the United States Department of Labor, is now issuing the California Labor Market Bulletin. The sending out of the questionnaires for this bulletin was begun in May, 1924, with the cooperation of the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco, but in September, 1924, the active cooperation of this bank was withdrawn in favor of the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. This latter federal agency furnishes the franking privilege in the sending out of the monthly questionnaires.

Numerous requests have been received by the bureau to enlarge the California Labor Market Bulletin so as to include separate statistics for the larger cities of the state. Thus far, however, this request has not been complied with, because of the limitations under which the bureau has been obliged to carry on this important work.

The latest, November, 1924, issue of the California Labor Market Bulletin which is distributed in mimeographed form, is reproduced below:

STRIKES AND LOCKOUTS.

In the next tables, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6, are presented data relating to strikes reported by manufacturing establishments in the State of California.

The total number of strikes reported by 2882 manufacturing establishments for the year 1922 was 32; while for the year 1923 the number of reported strikes was 37. No lockouts were reported. It is probable that in some cases lockouts should have been reported instead of strikes.

Table 2 shows that in both years 4993 persons were involved in the 69 strikes reported. Of these persons, 4136 were males and 857 were females.

Table 3 shows the causes of the strikes. The largest number of these strikes, it will be noticed, was for increases in wages. The next largest number of strikes was against the open shop or for union recognition.

The duration of the strikes is shown in Table 4. The largest number of strikes is reported to have lasted from one to three months; the next largest number of strikes lasted one day.

The results of the strikes are shown in Table 5. According to this table, based upon employers' reports, of the total number of 69 strikes reported, 49 or seventy-one per cent resulted in favor of the employers; the remaining 20 strikes, or twenty-nine per cent, resulted either in favor of the employees or were compromised.

In the months of January, April and August were reported the largest number of strikes (Table 6).

EARNINGS OF CALIFORNIA WAGE EARNERS.

The data pertaining to the earnings of California wage earners, submitted in the following tables, are based upon the state census of manufactures annually made by the bureau. This census is obtained by sending out questionnaires to establishments employing more than five employees. Owing to the bureau's limited appropriations, it is impossible to send out field agents to check up the accuracy of certain schedules filled out and returned by the manufacturers. All schedules are carefully edited and those which are badly and inaccurately filled out are not used in the compilation of the statistics. The data submitted below have been compiled from questionnaires entitled Annual Statistics of Manufactures, 1923, covering that calendar year. The detailed data covering each industry separately will be found in Part IV of this report.

The following summary tables contain comparative data for the years 1921 and 1923. The wage statistics submitted are based, in both years, upon reports of weekly wage rates as of the middle of December of each year.

The number of establishments included in the 1923 census of manufactures was 2882, compared with 2124 establishments in 1921. This represents an increase of 758, or 35.7 per cent. The number of wage earners included in the 1923 census of manufactures was 205,220 which represents 84.2 per cent of the average number of wage earners reported by the United States Census Bureau in 1919. This is considered a sufficiently large sample fully to warrant the presentation of the data and the general conclusions drawn therefrom.

Table 1 shows the number and proportion of California wage earners earning specified weekly earnings in 1923 compared with 1921.

It will be noticed that in 1923 the proportion of wage earners whose weekly wage rates were between $16 to $17.99 was 8.4 per cent compared with 10.4 per cent in 1921. The percentages of wage earners whose weekly wage rates were less than $16 were 11.7 in 1921 and only 7.1 in 1923. This fact indicates a general movement of the wage rates upward since 1921.

In 1921, 28.2 per cent of female workers 18 years of age and over received wage rates under $16, while in 1923 only 20.4 per cent received wage rates under $16 per week.

It should be noticed further that in 1921 and in 1923 the proportions of female workers 18 years of age and over receiving between $16 to $17.99 were practically the same. Thus, in 1921 the percentage was 30.4, while in 1923 it was 30.6. The fact that there has been no change in the minimum wage orders by the Industrial Welfare Commission during this period probably accounts for the fact that there has been no change in the proportion of women workers receiving the minimum of $16 or somewhat more than the minimum.

While the schedules upon which Tables 1 to 3 are based called for wage rates, many employers reported earnings instead of rates. The wage rates under $10 per week, especially as applied to women workers, are most probably earnings for the reason that under the rulings of the California Industrial Welfare Commission wage rates under $10 per week are not permitted, except to certain apprentices in manufacturing and millinery industries.

The wage rates of males and of females under 18 years of age are shown in Table 3.

The annual earnings of California wage earners in 1923 are obtained by dividing the total amount of wages paid during the year by the average number of wage earners during the year. Although the average annual earnings shown in this table are approximate, they nevertheless are fairly indicative of the earnings of workers in the several industries.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL.

OFFICE OF CALIFORNIA STATE BOARD OF HEALTH,
SACRAMENTO, September 1, 1924.

To His Excellency FRIEND WM. RICHARDSON,
Governor of California.

DEAR SIR: In accordance with the state law, I herewith transmit to you the twenty-eighth biennial report of the State Board of Health for the seventy-fourth and seventy-fifth fiscal years.

Respectfully submitted.

WALTER M. DICKEY, M.D.,
Secretary of State Board of Health.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY.

The most outstanding feature of public health in California during the biennial period, July 1, 1922, to June 30, 1924, lies in the increased activity in local health departments, together with the expansion and continual development of the full-time health unit. The development of community responsibility and the cultivation of a marked spirit of independence upon the part of the governing bodies of many counties and cities indicates clearly the trend of public health in California at the present time. More and more, the staff of the California State Board of Health becomes a highly trained technical organization devoted to the provision of expert advice and assistance. Many communities are now able to accomplish work that heretofore was necessary for the State Board of Health to undertake. The employment of at least six hundred public health nurses by the various cities, counties and welfare organizations, constitutes a tremendous factor in the promotion of public health activities. The development of the full-time health unit is also a tremendous factor in the stimulation of public health activities in general throughout the state.

The chief function of any health department lies in the control of the communicable diseases. All other activities are corollary to this one. The general public is gradually becoming better informed concerning the control of communicable diseases and there is a growing response to the efforts of state, city, and county health authorities in their efforts to check the spread of these communicable diseases that produce so much disaster not only through the immediate cases of illness, but also through the distress and far-reaching after effects that produce disability in adult life. The general trend of communicable diseases in California during the past two years shows that efforts are being made in nearly every part of the state to keep these diseases under control. There are marked exceptions, however. Smallpox is entirely out of balance. Never in the history of California has the disease been so prevalent as it has during the past two years. The failure of individuals to secure protection against this disease by means of vaccination is the sole reason for the increase in the prevalence of this disease. It is an undisputed fact that the disease has shown tremendous increases only in those sections of the state where the general public is not thoroughly vaccinated. The disease has not appeared to any great extent in those sections of the state where vaccination is at least 60 per cent effective. It may be of interest to make a comparison of the prevalence of smallpox in California and in foreign countries. In 1923 the largest number of cases of smallpox to be reported in any country was in Russia, where there were 31,311 cases. In England and Wales during the same year, there were 2485 cases, and in Switzerland there were 2145 cases. In the United States, on the other hand, during the same year there were 29,968 cases. Smallpox then was almost as prevalent in the United States as it was in Russia, and of the 29,968 cases in the United States, 2028 cases were in California. It is a regrettable fact that this state contributed one-fifteenth of all the cases that occurred in the United States. During the year 1923, there were but seventeen cases of smallpox in Germany; one hundred and ninety-five in France, and two hundred and fifty-three in Italy.

During the year 1923, there was but one death from smallpox in California. It is characteristic of smallpox that the disease often appears in its most virulent form in the midst of, or following an outbreak of cases of a mild character. For this reason, it is safe to prophesy that the disease in a virulent form will appear in this state sooner or later. History shows this to be the true character of the etiology of the disease. Health authorities in California must continue advising the people in their respective communities to take advantage of the sure protection afforded by vaccination. Unless the general public will take advantage of this safest form of insurance, it is certain that the disease may exact heavy toll in California during future years.

The following table shows the number of cases and deaths from smallpox in California by years, since 1912:

Year	Cases	Deaths

DIPHTHERIA.

Diphtheria has been increasing in prevalence throughout the United States during recent years, and in California the increase during the last biennial period is conspicuous. There were 18,241 cases reported as against 15,249 cases reported during the preceding biennial period. More than one-half of the cases reported in California each year are in the large centers of population. Although diphtheria is prevalent to a considerable extent in the rural districts of this state, it is essentially a city disease. The added opportunity for contact in closely crowded centers of population is undoubtedly the chief factor in promoting the increased prevalence in urban centers.

The increased prevalence of diphtheria is by no means confined to California. Nearly every state shows similar increases. There are four reasons for this increase that may be readily explained. First, failure of parents to regard a sore throat as serious. Second, failure to secure efficient medical advice promptly. Third, failure upon the part of the physician to administer anti-toxin in all cases that may be suspicious of diphtheria within twenty-four hours after the onset of the disease. Fourth, treatment of cases of diphtheria by individuals who are incompetent. It is only during the past two years that immunization against diphtheria has been put in to more extended use. In New York state, where the bulk of this work of immunization has been accomplished, outstanding results have been secured. There were 27,029 cases of diphtheria in New York in 1921 against 15,048 cases in 1923. This remarkable reduction in the prevalence of diphtheria in New York state is due to the extensive immunization of children by means of toxin-antitoxin. This procedure, simple, harmless, and certain, is responsible for the tremendous reduction in the prevalence of the disease. Fortunately, California communities are beginning to take advantage of the tremendous boons that this procedure offers. In most of the smaller communities in the San Francisco Bay region, during the past two years, a large majority of children have been immunized. In a great many towns of the San Joaquin Valley, and in Southern California, immunization campaigns have also been conducted as well as in a few communities of the north coast district. With the extension of immunization, it is certain that as great results in the reduction of the prevalence of diphtheria can be obtained in California as have been secured in New York state, as well as in other states in the Union.

Comparing the prevalence of diphtheria in the United States with that of other countries, it is interesting to note that the disease was almost four times as prevalent in the United States as in England and Wales, and more cases were reported in England and Wales than in any other European country with the exception of Russia. In 1923 there were 144,124 cases in the United States, 40,009 in England and Wales, and 47,770 cases in Russia. Germany had 31,942 cases, France 11,033, Italy 10,922. Other European countries show a decreased prevalence. The reason for the large number of cases in the United States is inexplicable. From Wisconsin westward to the Pacific coast, including most of the Rocky Mountains and coast region, the increase was higher than in any other part of the country. One of the big pieces of work that faces every health officer in the state lies in convincing the people of his community that immunization against diphtheria is reliable and productive of certain results; and in providing machinery for accomplishing the immunization of all children in his district.

SCARLET FEVER.

Scarlet fever showed an increase during the last biennial period. There were 13,442 cases reported during the last two years as against 9674 cases reported during the two years preceding. Similar increases may be noted in other states, including Minnesota. On the other hand, many states have shown marked decreases in the prevalence of this disease during the last two years. The reasons for the increased prevalence of this disease in California are not known. Lax control of cases, failure to observe regulations for quarantine, missed cases, and similar factors undoubtedly have a great deal to do with this increase. Scarlet fever is a serious disease, particularly because of the tremendous toll it exacts in adult life. If every case of scarlet fever could be prevented, a very considerable number of serious illnesses of adult life could be conspicuously reduced. Health authorities are justified in adopting and enforcing most stringent measures for the control of this disease. The recent development of an immunity test for scarlet fever, as well as a means by which individuals can be immunized against the disease, gives promise of placing scarlet fever among those diseases that can be definitely and surely placed under control. With smallpox, diphtheria, scarlet fever and typhoid fever made absolutely preventable, a large amount of suffering among children and adults, as well as many deaths, can be absolutely prevented.

TYPHOID FEVER.

The typhoid fever death rate in California has been brought to about as low a point as can be expected reasonably. There were 1856 cases reported in California during the last biennial period as against 2090 cases reported during the two years preceding. The death rate has kept at about 4 per 100,000 population. The explosive water-and-milk-borne outbreak in Santa Ana, in Orange County, during January, February, March, and April, 1924, when 632 cases of the disease were reported with 48 deaths, will undoubtedly damage the excellent record that California has made in reducing the typhoid death rate, while the figures for this outbreak will normally be included in the biennial report for the coming two years. Mention is made here of the outbreak and of the disastrous effects that it will have upon increasing the morbidity and mortality rates for the whole state. A detailed report of the Santa Ana outbreak is published in another portion of this volume. It is doubtful if a more unfortunate outbreak has ever occurred in this state. Wide scatteration of carriers is bound to have an effect upon the incidence of this disease in California for years to come. The present status of this disease within the state emphasizes its importance. Health officers must renew their activities in keeping this disease within control. It is not likely that a widespread water-borne or milk-borne outbreak of this character will occur again. The incident of this single outbreak, however, shows that extreme precautions against the contamination of food supplies by means of the control of carriers, must be undertaken and maintained during future years. The provision of pure water supplies is always important, but the prevention of the contamination of food supplies constitutes the chief problem of the health officer in keeping this disease under control.

PLAGUE.

Every secretary of the California State Board of Health since 1907 has prophesied that plague, since it is endemic among rodents within the state, will again constitute an acute and direct menace to the health of human beings in California. Every secretary has advocated as a matter of economy that a liberal appropriation should be made by each legislature for carrying on work in the eradication of plague-infested rodents. During the present year, ground squirrels in large numbers have been found dead in San Luis Obispo and Monterey counties. Bacteriological examinations made by the U. S. Public Health Service determined that most of these rodents die of plague. The prompt adoption and enforcement of measures for the control of the disease among ground squirrels on the part of federal, state and county authorities, was productive of immediate results in checking the progress of the outbreak among these rodents. Cases of human plague occur at irregular intervals in counties constituting the area in the immediate vicinity of the San Francisco Bay. That the disease exists among ground squirrels spread over a wide area, is certain. As long as foci of plague infection exists, there is danger to the people of the state. Measures that would provide for the extermination of ground squirrels would be productive of beneficial results. At the present time, the limited funds available for expenditure by both federal and state health authorities, make it impossible to do more than to determine an index of infection. If we are able to hold the disease in check, we shall do remarkably well.

Undoubtedly conditions shall develop at some future time which will cause plague to flare up again as it did in 1907 and 1908. If it were possible to spend the funds that are required in the extermination of rodents, the possibility of an outbreak of the disease among human beings would be greatly diminished, if not entirely eliminated. Campaigns against rats, which are also responsible for the transmission of plague, are conducted periodically in the large centers of population. This is undoubtedly the best form of insurance against plague that municipalities can undertake. In the final analysis, efforts in the control of plague among rodents must be continuous if they are to accomplish complete results.

MALARIA.

The report of the division of mosquito and malaria control, published in this volume, shows that there is increased activity in the mosquito abatement districts throughout the state. Stimulated by the work carried on under the State Board of Health, these communities of which the mosquito abatement districts are made up, have undertaken extensive programs in mosquito eradication. These activities have by no means been confined to the regions of the state where malaria exists, but they have also been put to work along the coast regions where salt-marsh mosquitoes are found. Activities in these districts of course have no bearing whatsoever on the control of mosquitoes, but they are productive of conspicuous results in providing increased effort for the residents of surrounding territory. With the continued expansion of the mosquito abatement district idea, and thereby through the availability of funds for carrying on this work, it would appear that California will ultimately be freed from this menace to its health and welfare.

RABIES.

There were eleven deaths of human beings from rabies during the biennial period just finished. Furthermore, rabies was never more prevalent among animals within this state than during the past two years. The tables published herewith show where the disease has been most extensive. Several cities and counties within the state have adopted ordinances which provide for the immunization of dogs against this disease. This procedure has been productive of marked results in the control of rabies. In communities where the disease has been most prevalent, however, there has been displayed marked apathy in any attempts to inaugurate control measures. It is unfortunate that these communities have not recognized the danger that exists not only to the residents of their own immediate vicinity, but to the people of the entire state. The control of rabies depends almost entirely upon the control of the dog population. Unless the various city and county communities within the state show a more determined desire to exercise control measures, it will be necessary for the state to provide vast sums of money in order that all of the people of California may receive the protection against this disease that is their due. There is no excuse whatsoever for permitting the deaths of eleven individuals from this most readily prevented disease. The problem as outlined is primarily a local problem, but unless local communities awaken from their apathy, it will be necessary for the state to undertake control work and at considerable expense.

INFANT MORTALITY.

It has been rightly said that infant mortality rates present a reliable index to the general health conditions that exist in any community. Direct activities for the purpose of lowering infant mortality rates do not accomplish the results that might be expected. There are many factors in the determination of this rate over which no official can exercise absolute control. Biological facts are responsible for the deaths of many individuals, all of which are unpreventable. There are, on the other hand, many causes of infant mortality which are possible to correct or eradicate. Those communities where general public health activities are carried on unremittingly invariably have the lowest infant mortality rates. On the other hand, unless communities where little or nothing is done in the promotion of the public health, infant mortality rates are invariably high. In some sections of the state, the utter lack of sanitation and ordinary rules of cleanliness among the foreign-born population, have a direct bearing upon the production of high infant mortality rates. If health departments in those cities and counties where there are large Mexican populations would provide these foreigners with adequate machinery for the protection of their health, considerable might be accomplished in reducing the infant mortality rate for the whole community. Just so long as nothing is done in the control of communicable diseases and in the promotion of general sanitation among Mexican people, just so long will these communities suffer from high infant mortality rates for their entire population.

Babies in Santa Cruz, California, had a better chance for life than the babies of any other city in the birth registration area of the United States. Santa Cruz's rate for 1923 means that only 26 infants out of every one thousand born within the city died during their first year.

Not only Santa Cruz but the entire State of California has a very low infant mortality rate. Los Angeles with a record of 72 ranks third among the ten largest cities of the country, while Pasadena with 37 stands first among cities of 50,000 to 100,000 population. The state itself having a rate of 66 holds fourth place among the 30 states and the District of Columbia which comprise the birth registration area. The report issued by the American Child Health Association covers this area and includes cities of more than 10,000 population.

Winchester, Massachusetts, is the only one other city in the birth registration area with a record equal to Santa Cruz. This city also has an infant mortality rate of 26 as compared with the average rate of 78 for all the cities within the area.

The states holding better records than California are: Washington 51, Oregon 53, and Minnesota 62. As in 1922 the Pacific coast states again lead all sections of the country. The sectional rate for Washington, Oregon and California is 57, the lowest rate for any section within the birth registration area.

The infant mortality record issued by the American Child Health Association, of which Herbert Hoover is president, has become an annual report, designed to interest the American public in a reduction of mortality rates all over the country. The figures for the report have been secured from the United States Bureau of the Census and from state and local authorities. In addition to data from the birth registration area the report also takes in statistics from other territory within the death registration area, the total cities covered amounting to 665.

Twenty-five cities are listed in the California statistical tables. These cities with their comparative rates for 1922 and 1923 are as follows:

CANCER.

While cancer is not essentially a public health problem, since little or nothing is known regarding its etiology, the gradually increased mortality for this disease makes it of prime importance to the general public. Each year more people in California die from cancer; furthermore, the death rate for this state is the highest of that for any state in the Union, and the death rate for this disease in San Francisco is far higher than the same rate for any other city. An investigation into cancer mortality in San Francisco has been undertaken by one of the insurance companies. In commenting upon the high cancer mortality rate in San Francisco and in California, Dr. Louis R. Dublin of New York has said recently: "There are two statistical reasons why the California cancer rates are higher than in other areas. The accrued death rates are higher because California has a proportion of persons of ages above 45 larger than is found in many other states. Even if there were no higher cancer death rates at a specific age in California, we would expect a higher accrued rate because of the concentration of older persons in the population. California has 26.170 of its population at ages 45 and over and this is the highest ratio for the ten states for which records have been taken off."

RADIO HEALTH TALKS.

In the spring of 1922, the California State Board of Health began broadcasting public health information over the San Francisco Examiner Station, KUO. The first record of the use of the radio for the dissemination of public health information is that made during the autumn of 1921, when a talk on cancer was broadcasted from a station in Denver. Since December, 1921, the United States Public Health Service has used the naval radio station at Washington for broadcasting purposes.

The New York State Department of Health began broadcasting public health information from the General Electric Company station at Schenectady in the spring of 1922.

With the opening of the General Electric Company Station KGO at Oakland, the California State Board of Health began the broadcasting of a public health radio talk each Monday night. This schedule has been maintained for some time and is a regular feature of the public health education undertaken by the board.

REPORT OF THE DIVISION OF EPIDEMIOLOGY.

C. H. HALLIDAY, M.D., Epidemiologist.

TYPHOID FEVER OUTBREAK AT SANTA ANA.

Beginning during the morning of January 2, 1924, large numbers of residents of Santa Ana (27,000 population), the county seat of Orange County, California, began to be taken suddenly ill with an acute gastro-intestinal disturbance. This disturbance was characterized by severe diarrhea, nausea and vomiting. A large proportion of the population of the city was sick. Cases continued to appear in great number on the following day, January 3d. There is no way of determining the exact number of cases that occurred on these two days, but a conservative estimate places the number at 10,000. The work of business houses, schools and offices, in many instances, was completely disrupted owing to the large numbers of absentees. Most of these individuals were taken sick on the afternoon of January 2d, although many were taken sick during the night before and some did not become ill until a day or two later. Cases of diarrhea and vomiting continued even after the middle of January. Many of these cases lasted for a day or two, while in others the severe vomiting and diarrhea continued for weeks, completely prostrating the patient who, in most instances, was unable to retain any food.

The explosive character of the outbreak and the severely acute type of diarrhea, together with the extremely large numbers of persons affected, caused the residents of the city to become virtually panic stricken. Many individuals believed that the water supply had become poisoned. A diagnosis of what was termed "intestinal influenza" was common. There was no possibility, however, of securing a definite and exact diagnosis or of learning the true cause of the outbreak because of the fact that medical practitioners of the community were so busy attending their patients that little or no opportunity for medical investigations was possible. The city water supply was immediately subjected to careful bacteriological and chemical examinations, but nothing could be discovered that would show this supply as the source of the outbreak. Repeated bacteriological examinations of this water supply proved it to be of satisfactory quality and definitely potable. There had been no new wells brought in recently and no changes had been made recently in the water supply system. The twelve wells which supply the city are all drilled wells from 350 to 1300 feet in depth. These were established, from time to time, during the period 1887 to 1922. All are double metal cased with concrete bases and stand pipes. Immediately prior to January 2d there had been no changes whatsoever in the pumping system or in the water mains; no reservoirs had been cleaned out and no changes had been made in the vegetation or soil in the vicinity of any of the wells or reservoirs. On the evening of December 27th, however, a very heavy rain fell. This did not result in any perceptible discoloration of the water, however.

Newspaper reports represented the outbreak as that of a mysterious malady for which no definite diagnosis could be established. In response to its request for information concerning the outbreak the State Board of Health was advised, on January 9th, of the general characteristics of the epidemic and on that same day the Board's epidemiologist, Dr. Charles H. Halliday, left for Santa Ana, arriving there the following day, January 10th. Complete bacteriological examinations of specimens from patients was begun immediately with negative results for typhoid and with negligible results for dysentery. By the 17th of January blood specimens from patients who had been ill for two weeks with clinical diagnosis of bacillary dysentery gave positive agglutination tests for the Flexner and Hiss-Russell types. The number of specimens from which positive agglutination tests were obtainable, however, was extremely small.

On January 23d Dr. Allen F. Gillihan, district health officer of the California State Board of Health, was detailed to Santa Ana to assist the epidemiologist, Dr. Charles H. Halliday, and the staff was later augmented by Mr. R. F. Goudey, division engineer of the Bureau of Sanitary Engineering.

By the middle of January it became apparent that many persons who had been taken with the severe diarrhea and vomiting early in January, did not make recovery as the days went on. Many physicians still had anywhere from 10 to 15 or more patients who were desperately sick demanding close attention. It was about this time that several physicians spoke of the conditions of their patients as resembling that of typhoid fever. In view of the extensive and explosive character of the outbreak these suggestions received little attention, however. As already indicated, diagnostic laboratory examinations were of no assistance during the early days of the outbreak. The investigators became more convinced, day by day, that the patients they were visiting were sick with an illness that was clinically identical with that of typhoid fever. They immediately began to collect specimens for blood culture and Widal's. This was fully confirmed by the laboratory reports which followed. It was January 16th that a first definite clinical diagnosis of typhoid fever was made in a single case. By January 29th, forty cases of typhoid fever had been reported, many of which were proved by laboratory examination. Several deaths had occurred by the end of January. On January 31st there were 101 suspected cases of typhoid, 14 proved cases and 6 deaths recorded. It appeared now that the outbreak would be of enormous proportions. By February 1st, 150 cases of typhoid had been reported, 50 of which had been proved in the laboratory.

The investigators were, of course, firmly convinced that the outbreak was due to a sudden and extensive pollution of the city water supply, but they were unable to prove it in any manner whatsoever. Repeated examinations of the city water supply brought only negative results. There was no question regarding the diagnosis of typhoid fever and there was no doubt, upon the part of the investigators, regarding the source of the trouble. Proof, however, was utterly lacking. Upon February 4th it became necessary for the investigators to issue a public statement concerning the outbreak. This statement took the form of a declaration. The publication of this declaration tended to focus public opinion upon the plausibility of a possible contamination of the water supply shortly before the original outbreak of January 2d. This declaration, in fact, was the first authoritative statement relative to the outbreak that had been made. Its effect was decidedly beneficial. Intensive investigation into the city water supply and sewerage systems was undertaken. Assisted by the city water department, many sewer and water pipes were dug up, old and defective village construction was found, but there was no evidence sufficient for believing that this old construction played any part in bringing about the widespread explosive epidemic. The history of a severe rainstorm on the night of December 27, 1923, at which over an inch and a half of rain fell, backing up sewers and lifting off a number of heavy cast iron man-hole covers was believed to be connected with the epidemic. This belief became a convincing proof on February 27th. In attempting to locate the path leading from the sewer system to the water system, a large amount of experimental work was undertaken. While thus engaged it was discovered that in one of these experiments raw sewage was being pumped directly into the city water supply. It was found that the overloaded main sewers backed up sewage into an old forgotten drain which led to one of the well sumps. When this sewage backed up to the well sump it ran down into the well, due to rusted casing, and was pumped up by the airlift pump into the city reservoir and out through the distribution system. It is estimated that during the night following the storm of December 27th, from one-eighth to one-tenth of the water consumed in Santa Ana was pure sewage. Strange to relate, there were few complaints of taste or odor of the city water supply during the days immediately following the heavy storm. The finding of this old sewer emptying into the well sump brought a solution to the many difficulties encountered during the month of January in attempting to prove, bacteriologically, that the city water supply was contaminated. The reservoirs could be emptied in from eight to ten hours and since they were constructed of smooth wall cement they were easily cleaned out and quickly gave a negative bacteriological count. Upon this discovery of February 7th, the well was promptly shut down, the reservoir cut off, an enormous dose of chlorine was turned into the city mains and every possible avenue was used in advising the residents of the town to boil the water. Chlorination of the city water supply was actually started in less than fifteen minutes.

Now that the disease had been definitely diagnosed as typhoid and the source of the disease discovered and closed, the chief concern of the investigators lay with the problem of control of the epidemic to prevent its further spread.

By February 7th there were 227 clinical cases of typhoid in Santa Ana—75 of these cases had been proved by laboratory tests.

Cases of typhoid fever continued to be reported every day up to March 8th, the source for all of which cases was definitely established as due to the water supply. This original outbreak ended on March 8th, the total of 308 cases being classified as having their common source in the polluted water. Two hundred ninety-four of these cases were in Santa Ana, 9 were in the rural districts of Orange County and 6 cases were in places outside of the immediate locality to which the outbreak was confined.

Beginning about the middle of February, cases of typhoid due to the use of infected milk began to be reported. From now on the whole epidemic assumes a totally different characteristic. In reality we have two outbreaks other than the original outbreak, running simultaneously. The milk-borne epidemic and contact cases must be considered as two separate and additional factors. The first contact case was reported on February 4th. No other contact cases were reported until February 13th, following which time cases of this type were reported almost daily up to and including April 18th, which marked the official end of the entire Santa Ana outbreak. The total number of contact cases was 79, 60 of which were in Santa Ana, 12 in the rural districts of Orange County and 7 in outside territory.

Of the milk-borne cases there was a total of 186, 127 of which were in Santa Ana, 42 in Orange City and 17 in the rural districts of Orange County. No milk-borne cases were reported after April 1st. Pasteurization of milk supplies began on March 17th, following which date there was a marked diminution in the number of cases reported with a prompt and decisive fall in the whole curve for the milk-borne outbreak as shown in the chart published herewith.

By March 21st a total of 30 cases of typhoid fever had been reported in the city of Orange together with 8 cases in the rural district immediately adjacent to the city of Orange, all of which were traceable to the milk supply of a single dairy which had been supplying raw milk to the city of Orange, Santa Ana and vicinity. Nearly all of these cases in the city of Orange were in persons between the ages of 3 and 15 years.

Pasteurization of all milk used in the city of Orange was immediately ordered and steps were taken to make certain that no milk other than pasteurized milk was delivered. A few more cases of typhoid developed in the city of Orange before the pasteurization of milk became effective, making the total number for the outbreak in this city 41 cases. The last case reported from Orange gave date of onset as March 24th.

While the route of infection of this dairy was not definitely determined it is believed that one of the milkers, who became ill with typhoid about March 5th, is responsible for the contamination of this supply. Following the pasteurization of milk in this dairy the Orange City outbreak came to an abrupt end.

Most of the cases which produced the second wave of the general epidemic were directly traceable to the milk supply, which had become infected either by acute cases or carriers on the various dairies supplying milk to Santa Ana or by milk bottles taken from infected homes and not thoroughly sterilized before being put in use again. It is probable that the last mentioned route of infection of the milk supply was responsible for the majority of cases which developed during this second wave of the epidemic. No milk-borne cases of typhoid were reported in Santa Ana following March 31st, showing that the pasteurization as beginning on March 19th was immediately effective in bringing this milk-borne outbreak to an end.

Of the whole number of cases reported in the entire outbreak 308 or 48.72 per cent were attributable to the original pollution of the public water supply. Two hundred forty cases or 37.96 per cent were traceable directly to the infection of raw milk. Seventy-nine cases or 12.50 per cent were attributed to direct contact with the previous known cases. Five cases out of the 632 reported could not be attributed to any known source. The five persons in whom these cases existed actually had the disease in other parts of California or in other parts of the United States. Every infection was traced to Santa Ana. The following tables giving the age distribution in each of the three phases of the general outbreak show that in all three the highest incidence was in the school age group:

MORTALITY.

There were 48 deaths among the 632 persons who contracted typhoid fever in this outbreak, 17 of these deaths being in persons between the ages of 15 and 24 years. There was one death to every 14 cases of typhoid in this outbreak.

IMMUNIZATION.

Under the auspices of the American Legion Post in Santa Ana a typhoid inoculation clinic was established in the Legion Hall. Vaccine was supplied by the state and bought by the city from commercial laboratories. Inoculations were given by physician members of the American Legion. This inoculation clinic extended from March 24th to April 19th, during which time:

- (1) 2,463 people were given the full course of three injections.
- (2) 479 received only the first and second injections.
- (3) 456 received only the first.

A similar clinic was established at Orange in a room in the City Hall under the direction of the community nurse, from April 1st to April 18th inclusive. A total of:

- (1) 338 persons received the complete series of three injections.
- (2) 39 had only two injections.
- (3) 43 had only one injection.

A similar clinic was established at Tustin, a small suburb of Santa Ana, from April 1st to April 15th. It was established at the request of the school authorities and inoculations were made by a local physician and the county health officer.

- (1) 93 received the complete course of three injections.
- (2) 24 had only two injections.
- (3) 5 had only one injection.

A total of:

- (1) 2,894 received the full course of three injections.
- (2) 532 received only two injections.
- (3) 504 received only one injection.

Cases of Typhoid Fever Having Had Previous Typhoid Fever or Previous Typhoid Vaccination or Both.

Of the 632 cases of typhoid fever in the series 9 had had typhoid fever; of these 9, 2 had been vaccinated in the army in 1918, and one had received two inoculations of typhoid vaccine just previous to taking ill.

Of the 632 cases of typhoid fever 9 had been vaccinated either in the army or navy in 1918 or 1919.

Of the 632 cases of typhoid fever exclusive of those who had previous typhoid or who had been previously vaccinated 12 had received one dose just prior to taking ill; 7 had received two doses and 2 had received three doses.

1.45 per cent of the cases had had previous typhoid.

0.5 per cent had had previous typhoid fever and vaccination.

1.45 per cent had been vaccinated in the army or navy in 1918 or 1919.

3.2 per cent had received from one to three doses of vaccine in 1924.

FOOD HANDLERS.

The ordinance by which physical examination of food handlers in the city of Santa Ana was required became effective on March 24th but the work of examining such food handlers was not begun until June. A remarkable spirit of cooperation in this work was shown by the proprietors of food handling establishments and their employees. During the period of June 1st to August 31st, 786 such individuals were examined for typhoid. 523 of these were men and 263 were women. One hundred eighty of these individuals belong to the age group of 15 to 24 years and 368 belong to the age group of 25 to 44 years. The remaining 232 were 45 years of age and over. Out of the 786 individuals examined 10 were found positive for typhoid; 7 of these were men and 3 were women. One of these individuals belonged to the age group of 15 to 24 years, 7 to the group of 25 to 44 years and the remaining 2 were 45 years of age or over. Only 2 of the 10 food handlers from whom positive results were secured admitted having had typhoid fever. No history could be obtained from the other 8 that was at all suggestive of typhoid in early life or during the epidemic. The past history of each of these 10 individuals was gone over very carefully and they were advised as to the best means of preventing the spread of typhoid fever. Written records of the interviews with each of these individuals were made and retained in the files by the health officer, Dr. W. Leland Mitchell.

CONCLUSION.

The Santa Ana typhoid fever outbreak was one of the most extensive ever recorded. Never before in the history of California have so many cases of this disease appeared in such great numbers and in such explosive fashion. While the outbreak itself lasted only from January 2d to April 18th its effect will be felt in California and elsewhere for years to come. We have no means of knowing the number of carriers resulting from this epidemic nor have we any means of knowing how extensive their travels may be. It is illuminating to learn, however, that a number of minor outbreaks of this disease that have occurred in California since April have been traced to an individual who contracted typhoid fever in the Santa Ana outbreak, or to individuals who may possibly have become carriers while present in Santa Ana while the outbreak was in progress.

SUMMARY.

1. About 10,000 cases of acute diarrhea and vomiting occurred in Santa Ana during the first half of January.
2. There were 632 cases of typhoid fever chargeable to the Santa Ana outbreak during the period January 2d to April 31, 1924.
3. Of the 632 cases of typhoid fever 308 were caused by polluted water, 240 were caused by polluted milk and 79 were due to contact with cases of the disease.
4. Forty-eight deaths occurred among the 632 persons who contracted typhoid in this outbreak. Twenty-seven of these deaths were due to the use of infected water, 16 were due to the use of infected milk and 5 deaths were among persons who contracted the disease through contact with other cases.
5. Two thousand eight hundred ninety-four individuals residing in the Santa Ana vicinity were immunized against typhoid fever during and following this outbreak.

REPORT OF THE DIVISION OF SANITATION.

July 1, 1922, to June 30, 1924.

EDWARD T. ROSS, Chief Sanitary Inspector.

During the biennial period ending June 30, 1924, about seven-tenths of the time of the inspectors in the Division of Sanitation was taken up with the enforcement of measures for the protection of the traveling public. This work covered the inspection of automobile camp grounds, summer resorts, roadhouses, and other places patronized by the traveler. Over 800 automobile camp grounds, 250 summer resorts, 440 roadhouses, 300 food supply places along highways and 469 comfort stations were inspected. Because of the great increase in the number of tourists the problem of protecting the people who travel in this state is continually increasing, and with the present small force of inspectors, such people are receiving less protection than they did several years ago. Unless the automobile camp grounds, summer resorts and similar places are maintained in a sanitary condition, provided with pure water supplies and sanitary waste disposal, the probability of the spread of communicable disease becomes progressively greater with the increase in the number of tourists. In order to obtain certain data on the subject of tourist travel in the state, a questionnaire was sent early this year to the owners of some two hundred automobile camp grounds located in various parts of the state. The reports received in answer to this questionnaire indicate that during the season of 1923, over 350,000 automobiles entered the camps represented and that these automobiles brought over 1,225,000 people to such camps. It is estimated that these people spent nearly $1,000,000 for camping privileges, supplies, etc., besides the money they may have spent for personal expenses, which was not inquired about. In addition to the above data, the United States Forest Service has reported that over 3,000,000 people visited the United State forest reserves in California during the season of 1923. In the past year or two many of the auto camp owners have provided cottages in their camp grounds. In many instances these cottages were found to be in an insanitary condition, no plumbing facilities being provided, with eating and sleeping in the same room permitted. In order to control the situation properly, the State Board of Health, on February 3, 1924, amended the regulations governing camp ground sanitation, requiring all cottages in camp grounds to be properly constructed, properly plumbed, and that separate rooms be provided for cooking and sleeping purposes.

Preliminary sanitary surveys were made of 65 cities and towns in various parts of the state. These surveys cover the inspection of food supply places, and other miscellaneous premises. In a number of instances the water supplies, sewerage and garbage systems were inspected. Over 2600 complaints relative to insanitary conditions in various places were investigated, 175 special investigations covering conditions considered detrimental to health were made, 1264 farms under control of Orientals were inspected, and conditions in 4 Mexican and 4 Oriental settlements investigated. In a number of instances local officials were assisted in formulating and enforcing measures for the sanitary control of food supply places, etc., and also for the control of rabies. As a result of the above operations, over 10,500 public nuisances were abated. In a large majority of the places inspected and reinspected it was found all improvements recommended had been completed and, it is safe to say that in 98 per cent of all places visited some improvement has been made.

For convenience, the activities of the Division of Sanitation are divided into the following five headings and the functions and operations under each heading will be found in the following table:

- I. Sanitary protection of the traveler.
- II. Sanitation of incorporated and unincorporated places.
- III. Complaints and special investigations.
- IV. Living conditions among Orientals and Mexicans.
- V. Cooperation with other offices.

REPORT OF THE DIVISION OF MALARIA CONTROL.

July 1, 1922, to June 30, 1924.

LOUVA G. LENERT. Sanitary Engineer.

The Division of Malaria Control was not created until January 1, 1923, although work in this line had been conducted during the previous year through the cooperation of the International Health Board, by which a sanitary engineer was detailed to study California conditions and assist in outlining a plan for malaria control to be carried on by the State Board of Health.

ANTI-MALARIA SURVEYS.

By July 1, 1922, with the assistance of Chief Sanitary Inspector E. T. Ross, comprehensive surveys had been made of five mosquito-infested areas in the state, and preliminary investigations were made in five more. This work was continued through the remainder of the year, by which time complete detail surveys had been made of nine widely separated communities. Illustrated reports were made on each, with maps, recommendations and estimates covering every phase of the work. These reports enabled the districts to work in a systematic manner with a future goal, using the latest scientific methods known in mosquito control, and thereby conserving the districts' funds with a corresponding increase in efficiency.

The reports on the above surveys were compiled and published in bulletin form under the title of "Malaria in California" early in 1923. Most of the illustrations and maps were omitted from the printed copy because of the expense.

ORANGE COUNTY SURVEY.

On the eve of the inauguration of the new whole time county health department, in the latter part of November, 1922, a survey was made covering all of Orange County, and an illustrated report was made with maps and recommendations for the control of Anopheles mosquitoes and prevention of the spread of malaria. This report was not printed but was turned over to the newly installed county health officer for action. Chief Sanitary Inspector E. T. Ross and Sanitary Inspector F. G. Veatch assisted in making this survey.

FISH HATCHERIES ESTABLISHED, 1922.

Early in April, 1922, a shipment of Gambusia affinis (top-minnow, or mosquito fish), consisting of 600 fish, had been received from Austin, Texas. In May, an additional shipment was received from Hearne, Texas, both consignments being planted in the Fort Sutter lily pond, Sacramento, through the courtesy of Mr. Frank G. Killam. This original planting of approximately 900 fish was permitted to propagate unmolested until July, at which time hatcheries were established at Anderson and Oroville, 600 fish being sent to each place.

Due to technical complications with other departments no more hatcheries were established and no further plantings made until the following year.

SPECIAL ASSISTANCE IN 1922.

More than 9000 gallons of oil was distributed to various districts during the 1922 mosquito season. This enabled the districts to engage in more permanent work with their own funds, according to suggestions made in the surveys mentioned, thereby materially increasing the efficiency of the work.

DIVISION CREATED.

The cooperative arrangement with the International Health Board terminated on January 1, 1923. The sanitary engineer was then taken over by the State Board of Health and directed to continue the work. This was made possible by a special appropriation of $20,000 made by the legislature in 1921 for malaria control during the biennium ending July 1, 1923. The state was now in a position to render continuous expert service in malaria and mosquito control for the first time.

MALARIA FILM.

A two-reel film showing the life history of the malaria parasite, illustrating how malaria is contracted through the bite of an infected Anopheles mosquito, and explaining why it is not possible to contract the disease in any other manner, was purchased for use in educational work in the control of malaria. This film was produced through collaboration with Consulting Entomologist W. B. Herms of the State Board of Health and has been given considerable distribution.

HAUCK BURNER.

Early in 1923 a grass burner known as the "Hauck Burner" was borrowed from the office of Field Investigations of Malaria, U. S. Public Health Service, Memphis, Tenn., for experimenting on cleaning of irrigation ditches of grass and debris by burning. It arrived too late to be of service for the 1922-23 season and it has been too dry since to make it safe for this purpose, therefore no definite knowledge as to its practicability was obtained.

SPECIAL ASSISTANCE IN 1923.

Oil was again furnished to the extent of more than 10,000 gallons to districts at Redding, Clear Creek, Anderson, Cottonwood, Durham, Los Molinos, Oroville and Visalia during the 1923 season. This enabled a considerable expansion in permanent work accomplished. Further financial assistance was given under the direct supervision of the sanitary engineer, as follows:

Los Molinos.

Approximately $1,260 was spent for labor in clearing, grading and brushing stream channels in addition to a limited amount of new ditching. More than this amount usually spent in temporary work was thus saved to the district. Double this amount has therefore been expended in further extending the permanent work done, with the result that this district has practically eliminated all mosquitoes, and malaria is a thing of the past.

Visalia.

The Delta Mosquito Abatement District, organized in September, 1922, had no funds on which to operate in the 1923 season, but through a donation by the city of Visalia, borrowing from the local banks, and state aid in the sum of about $1,100, practically every mosquito breeding

In addition to financial assistance more than 60,000 top-minnows were distributed throughout the district, all streams, ditches, creeks and sloughs receiving their quota.

Cottonwood.

Special assistance was rendered in furnishing teams and labor in opening drains in the Oak Park section north of Cottonwood.

Clear Creek.

In addition to furnishing thousands of top-feeding minnows to residents of this district, advice and explosives for a demonstration ditch of 700 feet was furnished.

Merced.

Following repeated visits, including surveys and estimates, the board of supervisors formed the Merced Mosquito Abatement District in October, 1923. Due to lack of funds in 1924 and also to quarantine regulations, due to the foot and mouth disease in cattle, no control work was undertaken this season with the exception of distributing top-minnows within the district.

TOP-MINNOW DISTRIBUTION.

Up to March 1, 1923, but three hatcheries for Gambusia affinis had been established. Soon after this, satisfactory agreements were reached with other state departments however, and their general distribution was undertaken. The accompanying cut showing their distribution July 1, 1924, illustrates the efficiency and popularity of this natural agent for the destruction of mosquito larvae. It has been necessary to require payment by the consignee of express charges on all shipments of fish.

In addition to the points shown, additional shipments have been made to Seattle, Washington, and Banff, Alberta, Canada.

Hatcheries are now maintained in a score of communities, but, being more convenient, the central hatchery is located in Sacramento. Due to the continued depredations of game fish from the adjoining pond it became necessary to abandon the Fort Sutter lily pond as a hatchery. Through the courtesy of Superintendent T. Ahern, of the Southern Pacific Company and Mr. Cannon of the Cannon Brick Company, it has been possible to establish a new hatchery in North Sacramento where unlimited numbers of Gambusia affinis can be propagated.

LECTURES AND PAPERS.

Numerous lectures and talks on mosquito and malaria control have been given, including boards of supervisors, councilmen, chambers of commerce, women's clubs, farm centers, dairy clubs, mass meetings, university classes and societies of various kinds.

A paper was given before the Health Officers' Section of the League of California Municipalities at Palo Alto in 1922, and in Coronado in 1923.

A bulletin on the mosquitoes of California and their control was written and published as Special Bulletin No. 44, "Mosquito and Malaria Control."

MISCELLANEOUS ROUTINE.

Additional surveys and inspections have been made and advice given on mosquito and malaria control at numerous places, including: Redding, Clear Creek, Latona, Anderson, Cottonwood, Los Molinos, Vina, Durham, Oroville, Meridian, Rio Oso, North Sacramento, Fair Oaks, Dinuba, Visalia, Bakersfield, Long Beach, Belmont, Seal Beach, Orange County, Merced, Buena Vista Lake, Fairfield, Suisun, Pittsburg, Bay Point, Concord, Martinez, Antioch, Woodland, San Francisco, Hanford, Lemoore, Salinas, Del Monte, Palo Alto, Napa, Los Angeles, Vallejo, Santa Rosa, El Verano, Chico, Plymouth, Sonoma, San Mateo, Belvedere, Novato, Petaluma, Burney Falls, Fall River Mills, McArthur, Pittville, Norman, Corning, Maltermoro, Sanger, Marysville, Pasadena, Riverside, Beverly Hills, Porterville, etc.

CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS.

Successful control of mosquito breeding on a large scale was demonstrated more than a score of years ago. The fact that many diseases, including malaria, yellow fever, dengue and filariasis, are spread by mosquitoes has likewise been known for many years, but it remained for the Great War to leave an object lesson in mosquito control which would stir the masses.

Since the close of the war there has been an increasing demand from all parts of the earth to be made mosquito free. California is no exception and few communities are now willing to submit to the annoyance, to say nothing of the dangers, of swarms of mosquitoes which make life miserable for their victims.

It is recommended that special provision be made in the next biennial appropriation for the support of the division, and in addition a fund of $20,000 be provided for assisting communities which are unable to finance first year control work. The control of malaria is not a problem of local communities alone, but one of importance to the state as a whole. California's future development is largely concerned with the control of malaria in its great valleys.

REPORT OF THE HYGIENIC LABORATORY,

July 1, 1922, to June 30, 1924.

WILFRED H. KELLOGG, M.D., Director.

The examination totals of the Hygienic Laboratory for the biennium ending June 30, 1924, show a slight falling off as compared with those of the preceding period that is in marked contrast to the rapid growth that had taken place between 1916 and 1923. This is in part due no doubt to the final reaching of the normal amount of demand for such a service from the medical profession, after which time any other increase of work would be due to growth of population, increasing percentage of physicians trained to the need of a laboratory service and perhaps also to the addition of new laboratory tests as the science advances. The principal reason, however, for the cessation in rapid increase was the necessary closing of the Sacramento and Los Angeles branches and the discontinuance of the manufacture and administration of the Pasteur antirabic vaccine. The chart (Figure 1), shows the effect of the closing of the branch laboratories. The two curves are constructed on a five months' average basis, the dotted line representing the examinations done either exclusively or principally in the main laboratory at Berkeley, and the solid line represents those examinations that were made in the branches as well as in the main laboratory. The drop in the number of examinations covered by the latter is clearly shown.

THE WASSERMANN TEST.

The number of Wassermann tests performed during the first year of the biennium was 21,389, and during the second year 20,564, a decrease of 825. This decrease is due to a change in the policy regarding the free acceptance of such specimens from physicians. Whereas, formerly no restrictions were placed on the diagnosis of syphilis any more than on diphtheria, the present policy is to limit the service to state and county institutions and free clinics, to the control of tests done by private laboratories when desired by physicians, and to indigents. Circular letters to this effect have been sent out to the physicians of the State with the result above noted. Most of the tests now being done are from state and county hospitals, free clinics, health centers, etc. The question as to whether or not the Wassermann test is a proper function of official public health departments or should be left to private laboratories is one that arises from time to time in different parts of the country, but not so often now as formerly. The unusual reason for the intrusion of this subject is to be found in the pressure that is brought to bear on health officers by the private laboratories on account of the fact that the Wassermann test is the most lucrative of all the laboratory procedures. It is my own belief that the unrestricted performance of Wassermann tests by a state laboratory results not in diminished business for the private laboratories but in increased business; the reason being that the free service educates physicians to dependence on the laboratory and they naturally turn to private laboratories for their pay patients if those laboratories bring themselves to their attention in such a way as to encourage confidence.

The Wassermann test is most safely and accurately done in a large laboratory doing daily tests in large numbers. This is because in the first place a competent serologist is more apt to be found in such a laboratory and his time is devoted to that work alone, and in the second place it is extremely difficult on a small scale to insure sufficient controls and to have reagents that are always dependable. As an example, guinea pig serum or complement must be fresh and from several animals; a requirement that makes a few tests so expensive that this condition is seldom complied with except in the larger places. In the proceedings of the Medical Research Committee (British), the report of the special committee upon the standardization of pathological methods, reporting on the Wassermann test, the following appears in the summary of recommendations:

"The laboratories in which Wassermann tests are performed * * * should be few rather than many, and should be so chosen with reference to the expected needs of the service that not less than an average of 100 tests should be made weekly.

"Reports upon Wassermann tests should be accepted only from pathologists who can afford evidence of adequate training and experience in the performance of the tests and of the control observations which are necessary for it."

In the report of the Technical Laboratory Conference held at Copenhagen in November, 1923, appears the following:

"The several methods for the serological diagnosis of syphilis should only be carried out in laboratories especially adapted to the purpose and by experienced workers, as it has been shown that even under the favorable conditions of the conference, individual investigators exceptionally obtained incorrect results with one or the other method. Such results were only recognizable through the great number of controls and render it strongly advisable continually to employ numerous control sera."

The above authoritative quotations are given to show the necessity of having conditions that are found in few laboratories aside from those of the State and to support the contention that the State Laboratory should be expanding and not contracting so far as this branch of the work is concerned.

APPROVAL OF LABORATORIES.

The Board of Health has taken cognizance of the unsatisfactory laboratory situation that has existed in this State owing to the freedom with which any one, qualified or not, could engage in diagnostic laboratory work. Physicians as well as employers of bacteriologists generally have not appreciated the necessity for a proper training in those entrusted with important laboratory identification of disease.

During the year 1923 a system of inspection and certification of diagnostic laboratories was begun through the State Hygienic Laboratory and is now being actively carried on.

The general powers of the Board in the control of communicable disease enable it to exercise control over the manner of making such tests, but as many private laboratories do few tests for the more important quarantinable diseases as compared to those having a more direct bearing on the public health, it was thought advisable to proceed without depending much on the possibility of compulsory control. This type of regulation could be achieved either by legislation or by invoking the general powers of the Board as above mentioned. However, it was thought more satisfactory results could be secured by depending on voluntary cooperation of the laboratories in a plan of approval and certification. This has been done and has met with a very cordial reception from all, particularly the better equipped private and hospital laboratories. In the operation of this plan a visit is made to every laboratory applying for official recognition. If the laboratory equipment and personnel, considering particularly the qualifications of the director, and if the technic employed is satisfactory for the examinations being done, a certificate of approval is issued. This certificate sets forth the particular examinations for which the laboratory is approved. No attempt is made to dictate any particular technical procedure, but the method used must be a seasonably proper one and carried out in a careful manner. The complete list of examinations that are at present considered is as follows:

1. Diphtheria.
2. Culture and smear examinations.
3. Virulence tests.
4. Typhoid and paratyphoid fevers.
5. Widal test.
6. Cultural identification.
7. Syphilis.
8. Complement fixation test.
9. Direct examination for Treponema pallidum.
10. Gonorrhoea.
11. Smear examination.
12. Complement fixation test.
13. Cultural methods.
14. Epidemic cerebrospinal meningitis.
15. Tuberculosis.
16. Smear examination.
17. Animal inoculation.
18. Dysentery.
19. Pneumonia.
20. Including type differentiation.

21. Malaria.
22. Rabies.
23. Bacteriological examination of milk.
24. Laboratory examination of water.

The certificate of approval of the Board is a desirable acquisition for any public diagnostic laboratory and a necessity for the purely public health laboratories. As the meaning of this certificate becomes more familiar to the medical profession in general it will become a necessity also for the few who do not at present regard its possession as essential in the retention of their present patronage by physicians. The number of laboratories approved during the past year is 47, which number includes 8 hospitals, 16 private laboratories and 23 municipal and county laboratories.

REPORT OF THE BUREAU OF TUBERCULOSIS.

July 1, 1922, to June 30, 1924.

EDITH TATE THOMPSON, Director.

There has been no curtailment in the hospital building program of the counties. Formerly, the director had to urge upon the counties, frequently many times, the necessity of providing care and treatment for their indigent tuberculous patients, but because of the success of the subsidy plan and the results in the many hospitals now giving care and treatment, the demand for help and advice the last six months has come to the bureau so that the building program in the counties has gone steadily on.

NEW HOSPITALS.

After nearly six years of inspection of various sites near San Francisco, coupled with the fact that a contract had been signed with Alameda County for permission to erect a building at Arroyo, a site near Redwood City was finally purchased by the supervisors of San Francisco County, and the property is now being graded, preparatory to building a new group of buildings for patients who are in the first stage of tuberculosis, with a preventorium for children. Provision will be made for a convalescent home for general medical cases, and a summer camp for the state aid group of children.

Los Angeles County has unfortunately reserved the plan of using Olive View for early cases, but is now in process of building a 500-bed institution to care for all classes of cases with only a minimum number of beds in the general hospital. Provision will be made on a separate 160-acre tract for children with active tuberculosis, and plans are contemplated for further provision for convalescent cases.

San Diego is completing a 36-bed building for men who are ambulatory cases. The children's building, which is badly needed along with the nurses' home for the tuberculosis department, will be placed in a bond issue this fall. The amount that will be asked for is $47,000. Merced County has built a very comfortable and useful building at the Merced General Hospital for advanced cases, that they do not wish to send to Ahwahnee.

San Mateo County is also operating a new 18-bed hospital in connection with their new general hospital.

Santa Clara County is building additional isolation buildings for advanced cases at their present hospital.

Tulare-Kings County has opened the largest building for children in the west. It is complete in every detail with provision for an open-air school, and isolation rooms in case of communicable disease.

Humboldt County, since the last report was written, has completed its school for the tuberculous, and in the near future contemplates providing additional beds for children. We wish the objectors to building at Eureka could see the copper-colored bodies of the patients who are taking heliotherapy. Never, even at the famous clinics at Rollier in Switzerland, have I seen the effect of sun treatment any more pronounced. Following the director's visit to Washington, after repeated conferences with the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs over the condition of the California Indians who are suffering with tuberculosis, a contract was signed with Humboldt County to care for the Indians on the Klamath and Hoopa reservations at a fixed charge per diem. It is to be hoped, this precedent being established, that other counties having an Indian population may also make a contract to care for these people at government expense.

Riverside, Orange and Imperial counties have purchased a tract of land above Banning and plans are being drawn for a sanatorium to cost $150,000. This hospital has been agitated for many years, and because of the great need, it is indeed fortunate that the location is one of the best in California. Located as it is at a 3500-foot elevation it will give the patients in these counties an opportunity to escape the trying summer heat. The Banning district is too well known to comment on except that the tri-county boards of supervisors were fortunate to secure such an excellent site.

Kern County, since our last report, has built a schoolhouse at Stony Brook and averages about twenty pupils from the sanatorium. It is interesting to know that in all of the hospitals wherever opportunities have been made for the patients to continue their education, they have taken immediate advantage of it. The Arroyo patients, through a gift, have been able to enter the university extension courses.

Weimar has increased its bed capacity 60 beds and contemplates additional beds in the near future.

San Joaquin County expects to build an entire new group of buildings during the coming year. This will include a separate building for children.

FUTURE PROGRAMS.

During the next two years an effort will be made to induce Siskiyou, Shasta, Modoc, Lassen, Tehama, Trinity, Butte and Glenn counties to build a joint sanatorium. None of these counties have a death rate, except Shasta, that justifies a separate institution.

OFFICIAL RECOGNITION.

With few exceptions nearly all of the clinics and tuberculosis nurses have now become a separate department in the local boards of health. The greatly increased attendance at the clinics shows how greatly they are needed. Hundreds of working people are able to secure diagnosis, treatment, and advice—and often continue their work pending arrangements for sanatorium care.

OCCUPATIONAL THERAPY.

This supervision was cut out in the economy budget, and as a result all of the hospitals, but one, have discontinued the work that it took years to develop.

SOCIAL SERVICE.

The follow-up work and the assistance that we were able to give the local nurses and welfare workers on problem cases was discontinued, because of lack of funds. The work with the state aid children whose fathers have died with tuberculosis was discontinued also, though it was saving the state thousands of dollars, as was shown in the San Francisco report.

EDUCATIONAL WORK.

The assistance that we were able to give the University of California Medical School with some special courses in tuberculosis was discontinued. The appropriation for printed literature was so small that we have been unable to supply literature to industries as we have in previous years.

SPECIAL WORKERS.

From time to time the hospitals have needed help in various channels. Previously we were able to assist them, especially in the smaller hospitals who do not employ dietitians. This service has also been discontinued, though pressure has been very great to have this work carried on.

COOPERATION.

The bureau has continued its cooperation with the U. S. Veterans' Bureau, but the director is greatly humiliated as any citizen must be, at the delay in giving the tuberculous ex-service man the care he is entitled to. In another year the hospital at Livermore will be completed, but it will be two years before the group at San Fernando is finished.

DIAGNOSTIC CHEST CLINICS.

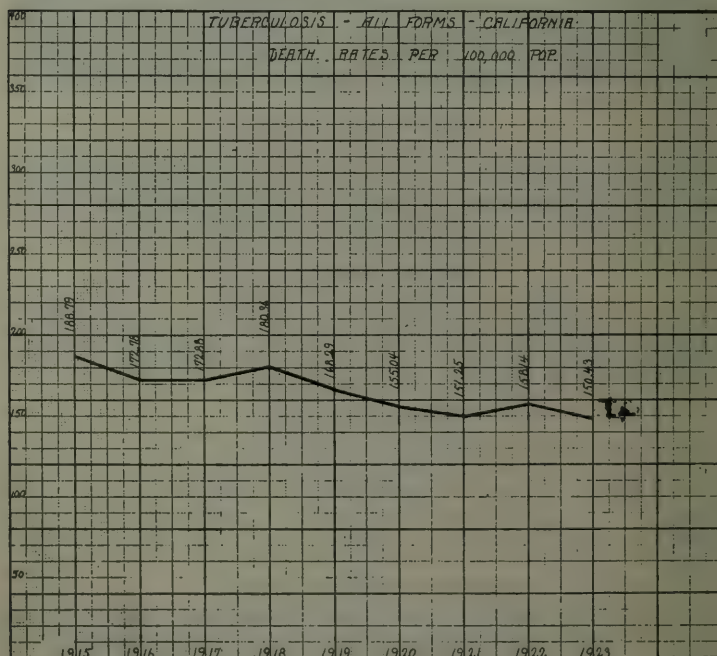

In cooperation with the California Tuberculosis Association, the Bureau's workers have helped in the diagnostic chest clinics in San Joaquin, Contra Costa, Stanislaus, Merced, Fresno, Kings and Orange counties, where over one thousand patients have been examined.

COOPERATION WITH SMALLER COUNTIES.

The Bureau is now cooperating with the smaller counties on the coast in an effort to have them erect buildings on the new site recently secured by San Francisco County. Santa Cruz and Santa Clara counties have already signified their willingness to erect buildings there, and the health department and finance committee of the San Francisco board of supervisors approve the plan. Invitations will be extended to Monterey and San Benito counties. The reason for this plan is obvious. The small counties have demonstrated their inability to adequately care for their patients. First, it is impossible to maintain a subsidized hospital in conjunction with an antiquated county hospital. Second, the smaller counties are not in a position to give proper medical care or supervision. Third, the expense is too great, where the ratio of patients is small, but in joining with a county like San Francisco, with the splendid demonstration that they have already made, the smaller counties will be assured of excellent results at a minimum of expense.

BUREAUS OF TUBERCULOSIS.

We have been able to assist in the development of two bureaus of tuberculosis, one in the San Francisco Health Department and one in the Los Angeles County Health Department. Both bureaus have full-time directors.

IMMIGRATION AND MIGRATION.

The director has repeatedly called attention to the fact that California is being deluged with a group of people who are a burden upon the community from the time they enter. Four years ago migration of tuberculous indigents had been reduced to a very negligible group. With the advent of so many ex-service men with tuberculosis, who are being sent into this state, it has brought serious problems among their families who have insisted upon following them. There has been the added social problem of the divorced wives of these men, many of whom are ill without funds. Very much more serious has been the problem of immigration, particularly among large groups of Russians who have reached California, many of them too ill to deport. The Secretary of Labor has given us excellent cooperation in deporting a great many people, but with the present Russian government, it has been almost impossible to establish any connection or deport any of the Russians who have entered California and become public charges.

FUTURE WORK.

Since the existence of three types of tuberculosis is now recognized we have been able in California to secure care and treatment for enormous groups of patients who would not have been cared for otherwise. With the type of tuberculosis present in young children particularly infants, we have not had to deal with any great numbers, due undoubtedly to the continued effort of certain organized groups in the state interested in pure milk. The state at large is greatly indebted to them for the service they have done. Second, the weighing and measuring campaign has brought out in every community among the rich and moderately well-to-do an amazing group of figures. These figures have more to do with the underweight of the American children, for children of foreign-born parents appear less frequently to come under the 7 per cent underweight group than the American child of native-born parents. Glandular tuberculosis and surgical cases of tuberculosis have been found in this group from five to twelve years of age. So apparent has been the necessity for the immediate care of borderline cases still inactive but whose resistance is so lowered that they scarcely are able to survive another cold, that preventoria supported by local tuberculosis associations have been opened all over the state. Here, under twenty-four hour supervision, the resistance of these children has been built up and they prove again that rational living and the elements of fresh air and sunshine coupled with proper medical supervision has restored, we believe, permanently hundreds of these boys and girls, who at the moment of their entering the preventorium were so definitely marked for tuberculosis that one was compelled to wonder if anything could be done. This much is evident to all workers who have watched the weighing and measuring campaign; first, the after effects of inadequate convalescence from contagious disease, has with the large percentage of the entire group shown the necessity for a campaign on the relationship between tuberculosis and contagious diseases, particularly with reference to measles. Second, a lack of home control, and the ignorance or indifference on the part of the mother has made every opportunity for a lowered resistance possible. Third, tuberculosis in childhood, particularly pulmonary tuberculosis, is difficult to diagnose, since the X-ray plates of the chests of normal children do not vary much from the chests of those often in the last stages of the disease. The Bureau should within the next two years carry on an intensive campaign through the public schools for two things; extremely careful supervision of the underweight child who needs supervision and often more rest instead of exercise. A more careful physical examination among the group of children whose attendance is irregular and who have been in contact with a tuberculous adult. Looking over the statistics in hospitals of the large number of patients of high school age, it would appear that more careful supervision is needed among the post-adolescent group who are indulging in athletic training. An agitation should be carried on for credit for rest hours the same as credit is given for exercise.

FUTURE PLANS FOR PATIENTS.

The accompanying tables will show the great variety of people who are cared for in our hospitals. When the Bureau began its campaign nine years ago, the only group cared for in any numbers was the casual laborer. It was the contention from the beginning that if better facilities for care and treatment were provided, practically every group in the community, if their funds were limited, would take advantage of the care offered. But in view of the fact that the state is nearly five years ahead on its program, we are now confronted with a new problem. The counties must be saved the expense of caring for the same patient twice. Hundreds of our patients are being discharged every year in excellent physical condition. They are no longer hospital cases, and the counties should not be obliged to continue giving them hospital care, but no person should leave a sanatorium and step into an eight-hour day to compete with a well person. During the next two years some plan must be worked out where patients can be transferred and given a chance to work up to the eight-hour day as rapidly as their physical condition will permit. An experiment is now being made by the California Tuberculosis Association to determine how rapidly patients from institutions can be put into an eight-hour day. It is hoped that a report can be presented to the 1927 Legislature with some recommendations for a colony presumably operated by the state with the counties paying $3 towards the patient's care, the same as the state now pays the county. When such a plan can be worked out, it will mean economy for both the patient and the counties, for the counties will not have to increase their bed capacity, as patients could be rotated from the hospital to the colony. There is another important factor in connection with this plan that deserves mention; there are few people in the world who can stand the acid test of a long period of enforced idleness. This is particularly true with a group of people who have always felt economic pressure. When this pressure is relieved for a length of time, coupled with a fear of a breakdown in the case of a too early return to work, the community has to deal with a psychological problem that in many ways is as serious as a medical problem. The experiments in England at Preston Hall and Papworth Hall, the industrial and agricultural colonies started at the end of the war for the ex-service men with tuberculosis, have shown very clearly that a program can be worked out that in a year or so, under the right supervision, can not only be made self-supporting, but that can return its workers to economic independence. Our declining death rate in California in spite of our increase in population, coupled with the cooperation of the boards of supervisors in most of the counties has shown that control of tuberculosis in this state is possible. Ten years ago California headed the list of states for the highest death rate from tuberculosis. Today we occupy fifth place and it is only a question of another year when we shall probably drop to seventh place. The director wishes again to call attention to the excellent medical care that is now being given in the hospitals, and to the fact that taxpayers all over the state in asking for a reduction of the tax rate have stipulated at public meetings that they do not wish any reduction in the money being allocated to the tuberculosis hospitals. The supervisors, with the exception of the two counties, have given the bureau at all times excellent cooperation and in fact have far exceeded in many instances the requests made to them, in their willingness to provide everything that is needed to make sick people comfortable. The Bureau hopes the next legislature will make it possible for us to continue our research work on the causes of tuberculosis and to be of assistance to the communities in the next two years, as we were previous to 1923. The Bureau is indebted also to many of the state departments for their help and interest, and we greatly desire since our present group of patients are mostly young people with years of useful life ahead of them, that we can, during the next two years, work on the convalescent plan mentioned. It is interesting to note that the recommendations made by the Tuberculosis Commission appointed in 1909 have nearly all been carried out with some degree of success, and that the convalescent plan mentioned was part of their report.

We have made a brief survey of the clinic attendance in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Sacramento, San Jose, Santa Barbara and Pasadena, reporting only on the actual cases of tuberculosis under treatment, but not on the people examined and found nontuberculous. In Los Angeles city clinics it is interesting to note that 1132 men and 910 women are under treatment, 726 American-born and 730 are Mexicans who compose the largest number of foreign-born receiving treatment. In the age groups there were seven children from 5 to 14 years of age, 446 men and women from 15 to 24, 681 from 25 to 34, 523 from 35 to 44, 222 from 45 to 54, 123 from 55 to 64 and 40 in the group over 65.

At the Temple Block clinic, Los Angeles, a study has just been completed of the children attending this one clinic for the period from July 1, 1922, to July 1, 1924.

In the same period of time the admissions into Olive View and the tuberculosis wards of the Los Angeles General Hospital totaled 7 in the 1 to 4-year group, 49 in the 5 to 14 group, 174 in the 15 to 24 group, 193 in 25 to 34, 177 in 35 to 44, 94 in 45 to 54, 42 in 55 to 64 and 21 in the group over 65.

It is interesting to note that here as with the clinics the largest percentage are among those born in the United States and that the largest group in the hospital is 193 between the ages of 25 and 34, as against 681 in attendance at the clinics. The economic loss among this group continues everywhere to be appalling for the reason that almost invariably tuberculosis in this period changes completely the social status of the family group for the remainder of their lives. Economic independence has not been achieved, young children must be cared for, frequently it means infection of the entire group. It would appear that the need of periodic examinations among wage earners is necessary for their own protection. The fact that early discovery means early recovery must be stressed again and again.

In San Francisco in the clinics, 923 men and 386 women were receiving treatment, with no foreign group predominating as in Los Angeles; 596 were American born. In the age groups 7 were from 1 to 4 years, 24 from 5 to 14, 217 from 15 to 24, 312 from 25 to 34, 351 from 35 to 44, 242 from 45 to 54, 111 from 55 to 64, 42 in the group 65 years and over. In the hospital admissions at the City and County Hospital, 6 were from 6 to 14, 79 from 15 to 24, 97 from 25 to 34, 104 from 35 to 44, 76 from 45 to 54, 13 from 65 years and over. In San Francisco the age group in both the clinic and hospital are highest in the group from 35 to 44.

The total clinic attendance for the period of January 1, 1923, to August 1, 1924, in Los Angeles, in Pasadena, San Francisco, San Jose, Santa Barbara and Sacramento was 3659 exclusive of the report on the children mentioned above. This does not include Oakland, Berkeley, Los Angeles County, San Diego, Fresno, Bakersfield, Stockton or Riverside. In the same period 2691 patients were cared for in the subsidized hospitals.

OCCUPATIONS OF PATIENTS.

Studies in industry need to be made on individuals rather than groups. The reason for the highest percentage being among the casual laborer is obvious in tabulating the group of 406 laborers. This refers to the casual only as those in the skilled trades are listed separately. The story of the casual laborer in California could be written only as the greatest social tragedy and the most serious economic problem that the state has to meet. That they head the list of hospital admissions and highest number in the tuberculosis death rate is to be expected. A lack of distribution of labor necessitates the long tramp from the lumber camps in the north to the fruit picking in the valleys and the cotton and lettuce in the far south. The struggle for existence is so great that these men dare not take the time to find out if they have tuberculosis until frequently it is too late; they have a fatalistic attitude toward the thing that kills their greatest numbers. They constitute a serious public health problem because of their migration, but they are needed so badly in this state that the director, knowing the serious conditions in most of the lodging houses in the state, often has marveled at their patience and suffering, for with the exception of a few places where they may go and then never stay if they cough, since the closing of the saloons, there is no place where they can stay. There may be found at some future day a solution for this group, but it is with considerable satisfaction that this office realizes that at the end of a life of hardship and misery these men can at least find themselves treated on the same plane and as a part of the rest of the human family.

Young housewives continue to lead the occupations of women; 242 school boys and girls were cared for, 47 children of pre-school age and 34 college students received care. But it is interesting to note that while cement workers have been classed among the dusty trades, that there were 17 teachers in our hospitals and 16 cement workers. Among the food handlers there were 83 cooks, 38 domestics doing cooking, 24 waiters, 19 kitchen helpers, 14 restaurant workers, 13 waitresses, 10 bakers, 10 cannery workers, 9 dairymen, 8 butchers, 7 fruit pickers, 6 fishermen, 4 peddlers, 3 cafe stewards, 3 cafeteria steam-table workers, 3 candy makers, 2 hucksters, 1 biscuit packer, 1 candy packer, cafe manager, creamery worker, dining-car steward, fruit dryer, foreman for fruit company, peanut blancher, making a total of 253 among the food handlers.

We were unable to complete this study in the detail that it deserves, but it points clearly to the fact that a campaign of education and certainly yearly examination might save many of these people from the misery of tuberculosis, and the serious economic handicap that follows it.

REPORT OF THE BUREAU OF SOCIAL HYGIENE.

July 1, 1922, to June 30, 1924.

The activities of the Bureau of Social Hygiene have been carried on in a limited way under a small subsidy granted by the federal government. The bulk of the direct work undertaken by the bureau has consisted of the distribution of publications pertaining to the control of venereal diseases. Most of these publications are of an educational nature covering a wide variety of subject matter. Many thousands of these pamphlets have been distributed to persons who have requested copies.

The table accompanying this report indicates the extent to which venereal disease clinics have cooperated with the Bureau of Social Hygiene in reporting. During the biennial period, the total number of 12,413 new cases were brought into the twelve clinics that reported. During the past two years a total of 19,947 cases of syphilis were reported in California and 15,020 cases of gonorrhoea. Of these cases the physicians reported the following: Syphilis 11,939 cases and gonorrhoea 11,259 cases.

Reports from the State Hygienic Laboratory indicate that the following examinations have been made:

Wassermann.....	41,946
Gonorrhoea.....	4,168
Total.....	46,114

REPORT OF THE BUREAU OF SANITARY ENGINEERING.

July 1, 1922, to June 30, 1924.

C. G. GILLESPIE, Director.

WHY A BUREAU OF SANITARY ENGINEERING.

The Bureau of Sanitary Engineering was created by legislative enactment in 1915 and its functioning wisely placed under the State Board of Health inasmuch as its work is largely public health engineering. An appropriation of $15,000 per year was granted for its maintenance. The reasons compelling the creation of the Bureau were the increasing complaints and pleas reaching the Board for help in matters of sewage disposal and domestic water supply, and the need of enforcing hitherto inactive legislation for the protection of water supplies and for the sanitary disposal of sewage. Up to this time the only help of this nature which the Board had was the gratuitous and part-time assistance of Professor Charles Gilman Hyde of the Sanitary Engineering Department of the University of California.

There are in California approximately 1300 sanitary engineering works needing state supervision. Three hundred communities have sewer systems. About 620 communities have public water works. There are 376 swimming pools. There are 168 sewage treatment works and about 100 water treatment works in which the operation factor is all-important and which therefore need constant follow-up inspection. There are about 120 towns and cities whose sewage disposal is in a bad state and in need of improvement. The investment represented by these sanitary works over which the Bureau with but three engineers is intended to maintain supervision, is close to $500,000,000.

In addition to the communities having sanitary works at the present time there are in round numbers 300 small places having a population of 200 or more not yet incorporated. The sanitary conditions, however, and need of promoting sanitary works in them is great. They will progressively need sewers. Every town in the state, and even some of the smaller places, has a garbage problem, where technical advice or supervision would conduce to better results. There are fully 500 of these places. The Bureau has not been able to maintain a supervision over garbage disposal.

Under the provisions of the Acts later referred to, 742 applications for permits have been filed with the Board. Of this number only 386, or about 50 per cent, have been acted upon, for lack of staff. During this biennium there have been 109 permits granted representing works having an investment of approximately $22,000,000.

Eleven sanitary districts and four sanitation districts formed during the biennium. These district procedures have become suddenly popular. Seventy-five per cent of the work of the Bureau relates to sewage disposal, so great is the demand for sanitation. Nineteen new sewage treatment works were placed in operation during the two years.

During the biennium the staff of three engineers has performed 2764 pieces of sanitary engineering work, exclusive of laboratory work, and has reported or made record of what was done. The laboratory, which during the last year consisted of but one man, made 27,491 analyses on 6795 samples, mostly water. About 12,000 communications were dispatched on sanitary engineering matters.

This in brief fashion may give an idea of the accomplishments of the Bureau and tasks confronting it. Further on in this report the work of the Bureau for the biennium is given in greater detail.

The duties of the Bureau since 1915 have been increased by the enactment of a law governing the sanitation of swimming pools and a law to protest against pollution of shellfish layings and by a tremendous increase in the demand for its services by the public, particularly in the field of better sewage disposal. Its duties and functions are clearly defined, however, and are of a purely sanitary engineering nature, overlapping none of the functions of other state departments or bureaus of the Board itself. In condensed form, the program and scope of activities of the Bureau are now as follows:

Group I. Law Enforcement.

Enforcement of statutes and regulations relative to water supply, sewage disposal, stream pollution, nuisance, swimming pools, shellfish layings.

(a) Field inspection and follow-up of Bureau recommendations, especially where successful results depend on vigilant operation, or carrying out a specific plan. (b) Render advice and reports as a result of activities of field engineers and sanitary inspectors, and on important matters coming direct to the Bureau; also on applications for permits, etc. (c) Give expert testimony at hearings, suits in court, etc. Conduct hearings. (d) Make stream pollution surveys. (e) Review plans for sanitary works. (f) Extend system of regular submission of operating records on all sanitary works and review these reports. (g) Supervise local water examination laboratories. Examine water for contamination and for elements affecting its potability and purification.

Group II. Advisory, Educational and Promotional.

Activities conducive to the promotion of sanitary engineering projects and improvements, to the development of a highly expert Bureau and to the dissemination of authoritative sanitary engineering information. These activities incidentally build up Bureau efficiency in law enforcement activities of Group I.

(a) Advise on sanitary engineering projects, nuisance abatement, etc. (b) Promote demand for sewerage and sewage disposal and for improved water supply of small towns now without these utilities; and for improved water supply, sewage disposal and garbage disposal of larger cities and towns. This requires detailed familiarity with what is and has been done elsewhere, its cost, satisfaction with results, special features and data for design. (c) Accumulate statistics and keep abreast of current literature useful in advising and promoting sanitary engineering improvement.

PUBLIC HEALTH ACT.

The sections of the Public Health Act relating to sewage disposal are most important to the people of the state. The object of these sections is principally to prevent and also to correct insanitary conditions dangerous to health, in sewage disposal throughout the state. The Board is given general supervision over these matters. Before it disputes and claims of injuries are adjudicated and righted, usually in advance of actual damage. In fact, the real purpose of the act is preventive rather than curative of insanitary conditions. Limited as is the Board in an engineering staff, the Bureau nevertheless has exerted a great restraining influence over crude or fanciful schemes for sewage disposal and by a slow process is raising the sanitary standards in this field, but is far behind the needs of the state and is unable to follow up the performance and operating attention devoted to sewage disposal so necessary to efficient results.

The act provides a permit system, giving the Board considerable police and semijudicial power. With the one exception—sewage disposal into dry cesspools—all other disposal whether upon sewer farms, into streams, the ocean or into sloughs, must first receive a permit from the State Board of Health. The Board must satisfy itself that the existing or proposed works, or extensions, effluent produced and the place and manner of disposal, will not result in a menace to health or a nuisance and that the proposed sewage disposal is necessary under all the circumstances. If its findings in these respects are favorable a permit is issuable. If unfavorable or if it finds the plant inadequate to secure such results, the Board is required to deny the permit, and thereupon to issue orders for such changes as it deems appropriate. The act provides for revoking permits upon cause and also penalties upon individuals or communities failing to carry out the terms of permit or the orders of the Board. The prosecutions are both civil and criminal and the penalties include fines or imprisonment or both. It has never been necessary, however, to invoke fully the penalty provisions of the act. In the first place the Board has not the legal machinery for this but must depend on local officials, usually loath to prosecute. Secondly experience has shown that more lasting and satisfactory results come through persuasion as to the local and moral need of proper sewage disposal than through prosecution. The Board in the past has relied almost wholly on the Bureau in carrying out this act.

SANITARY WATER SYSTEMS ACT.

The Sanitary Water Systems Act has for its purpose the furnishing of pure, clean, potable and healthful supplies insofar as state supervision can promote it. This act is similar in its workings to the Public Health Act, except that it is not applicable to supplies furnished to less than 200 consumers until such time as complaint against the supply is lodged with the State Board of Health. The act gives the Board jurisdiction over the healthfulness, potability and wholesome character of supplies. However, the time does not seem ripe, nor has the Board the staff, to attempt to promote other than the healthfulness feature of supplies. This leaves many supplies grossly unfit physically. In the not far distant future the Board should also as a matter of public policy take a stand on the clearness, cleanliness and potability of all domestic supplies.

For lack of personnel and because the public demands are greater in the field of sewage disposal, less than 25 per cent of the work of the Bureau is devoted to improving water supplies, though, as a matter of disease control, more far-reaching results are obtainable from the supervision of water supplies than from the supervision of sewage disposal. So far, supervision of water supplies by the Bureau has been restricted almost wholly to surface water supplies as it is in these that there is the greatest risk to health. It has succeeded in seeing that about 90 of these supplies have been provided with chlorinators to remove dangerous pollution, and it has furthered filtration of the Sacramento water supply, but it has not been able to follow up the operation of these works to make certain that they are accomplishing the results intended. A study of analytical results of several thousand samples indicated that in actual practice the chlorination is less than 50 per cent efficient. Hence there is still remaining a considerable element of danger in these supplies and need for other measures of greater effectiveness. The Bureau has not been able to devote any attention to the numerous well supplies throughout the state, notwithstanding that two of the serious typhoid epidemics in California this year occurred in cities so supplied, namely, South Pasadena and Santa Ana and environs.

SWIMMING POOL ACT.

As is proper on account of the greater popularity of swimming in this state, California in 1917 took the lead in swimming-pool sanitation. The act provides for the promotion of sanitation, healthfulness, cleanliness and safety of public swimming pools. This act, like the others herein outlined, operates under a permit system. However, beyond the formulation of an important set of regulations, adopted after a considerable survey of existing pools, and passing upon those permit applications as tendered, the Bureau has been able to enforce the law or inspect the condition of pools to which permits have been granted. Less than 5 per cent of the work of the Bureau during this biennium has been in swimming-pool sanitation, garbage disposal and miscellaneous phases of sanitation.

SHELLFISH ACT.

This act empowers the Board to investigate shellfish layings and to define the boundaries of areas in which it considers that shellfish may be polluted and from which they must not be taken. Scarcely nothing has been done by the Bureau along this line. It is probably not one of the pressing sanitary problems though it should be said that in 1915 one instance of typhoid in California was traced to just this source of infection.

HIGH POINTS OF ACCOMPLISHMENT.

A measure of the increased activity of the Bureau and the strong upward trend of sanitary engineering progress in the state is shown graphically in the accompanying charts. These show the sanitary engineering inspections by years, sewage works installations, permit actions and laboratory examinations by the Bureau.

Typhoid investigations.

During the biennium, investigation was made of the Santa Ana water supply at the time of its serious typhoid outbreak in the spring of 1924. The cause was found in a connection from the drainage sump surrounding one of the wells to a nearby sewer which, due to increased loading, frequently backed up and was spilled into the well. For lack of a keen supervision the condition was not disclosed until the Bureau undertook tests and investigations to ferret out the source of the epidemic.

Investigation was made of a minor typhoid outbreak at South Pasadena where a broken sewer in proximity to a low pressure water line which was corroded, allowed the sewage to pollute the water supply.

Investigation was also made of typhoid among the employees of the Southern California Edison Company at Big Creek, where due to the use of penstock water polluted by the sewage of the power plant operations above, one out of 20 water users contracted typhoid. As a result of this experience and on the recommendation of the Bureau, water supply protection and improved sewage disposal is being provided at the twenty-three camps and stations of the company, a laboratory is provided and a sanitary engineer placed in charge of all the sanitary work of the company.

Court actions.

The Board undertook its first suit under the Public Health Act, the case being against the town of Vacaville for refusing to apply for a permit to dispose of sewage and for creating a public nuisance. The Board was sustained in its contention by the superior court of Solano County with the result that the town of Vacaville subsequently rectified its sewage disposal to the satisfaction of the Board and applied for a permit.

A most signal decision in the case of private individuals against the city of Pittsburg on account of losses due to typhoid was rendered during this biennium by Superior Judge J. A. Plummer of Stockton. In that city a typhoid outbreak resulted from carelessness in chlorinating the supply, in the face of repeated warnings by the Bureau as to the dangers in the raw river water. Judgment holds that it is incumbent upon the city to use all reasonable precautions to render the water fit and wholesome. Damages were awarded to nineteen plaintiffs amounting to $32,821.29. The city has given notice of its intention to appeal the case.

Litigation over sewage disposal in which the Bureau participated with expert testimony has resulted at Santa Rosa, Pasadena, Watts and Los Angeles. At Pasadena, the city manager and sewer farm operator were charged with contempt of court in not carrying out a program of operations formulated by the Bureau and incorporated in a court order. Each was fined $125 and $50 respectively. In the case at Watts where an issue was made of the provisions of the Public Health Act making it unlawful to construct sewers without a permit from the State Board of Health, the supreme court reversed the trial court and held that permit for the construction of sewers from the State Board of Health was not necessary until the community desired to use the sewers. The decision of the trial court in the case of Kings County against city of Reedley, upholding the emptying of a purified sewage into Kings River was appealed to the appellate court on the contention of the city of Reedley and the State Board of Health that the river was not being contaminated, and judgment was sustained.

Water supplies.

In water purification a distinct advance has been made in California through the completion of the filtration plant at Sacramento. This is a $2,700,000 enterprise in which the latest developments in water purification have been incorporated.

The two largest cities in the state, Los Angeles and San Francisco, have joined the ranks of those cities which chlorinate their water supplies. In both cases this resulted from the insistence of the State Board of Health and the interest of certain local officials.

The Bureau continues to recommend to the Public Health Service in the matter of certification of waters used on common carriers in interstate traffic. The Bureau endeavors to examine or inspect all waters used on common carriers in the state at six-month intervals.

Following upon inability of the Bureau in 1923 to continue its examination of water supplies, brief instructions for simple tests which could be made locally, were issued by the Bureau and the following communities whose supplies are chlorinated, now have their water supplies examined at small local laboratories: Pacific Lumber Company at Scotia, Pacific Gas and Electric Company at Redding, Oroville, Auburn, Newcastle and Loomis, Sonora and Jamestown, Petaluma, San Rafael, Santa Cruz, Watsonville, Folsom, Folsom Prison, Port Costa Water Company at Concord, Crockett, Martinez and Port Costa, Hercules Powder Company at Pinole, Southern California Edison Company at Big Creek, and the sewage plants at Lake Arrowhead and Lodi. The total bacterial count on agar, though far from adequate, is relied upon for this purpose because of its simplicity. So far the tests for B. coli have not been attempted. This laboratory equipment is purchased for approximately $100.

Stream surveys.

The lower Sacramento River was sampled during the low water period in 1922 for salinity, to trace the backing up of tidewater from San Francisco Bay.

A preliminary survey was made of several streams receiving sewage to observe the resulting conditions and self-purification. The visible improvement in all the streams receiving sewage is most marked. During the summer time, it has been observed that within two or three miles below town sewer outlets, even the moss growth on stones so prominent near the outfalls has disappeared. Bacterial pollution shows a correspondingly rapid decrease but persists for 10 to 20 miles. The amount and velocity of stream flow and clearness of the water are important factors. These observations were made in the summer season as this is the period when campers are most apt to make sporadic use of the streams. During the biennium an intensive study of policy with respect to stream pollution and sewage disposal was made by the Bureau for the information of the Board. The information is contained in a 150-page report.

Sewage disposal.

A distinct advance has been made in sewage treatment in California during the biennium through the completion of two large activated sludge plants, one at Lodi and the other at Pasadena. Both plants are successful in producing a highly clarified, odorless effluent with scarcely any perceptible odor in the vicinity of the plant.

During the biennium other sewage treatment and disposal works were placed in operation in the following cities: Sprinkling filters at Davis, San Juan, Madera, Morgan Hill, Arrowhead Lake, Biggs and Dinuba. Imhoff tanks were completed at Kingsburg (improvements), Arrowhead Lake, Delano, Visalia and Whittier. Fine screens were installed at Los Angeles, Venice and Ventura. A Doten tank was installed at Manteca and a septic tank at Susanville.

An important permit was granted to the city of Los Angeles for the disposal of screened sewage into Santa Monica Bay under its $12,000,000 outfall and disposal program. In granting the permit the Board established for the first time standards of sanitation and cleanliness of bathing beaches applicable to the entire coast line of the state. The important requirements of the standards are: Absence of shore litter of sewage origin, absence of bacterial pollution by sewage of waters where used for bathing purposes and absence of slick and nuisance in the water itself.

A striking movement has been undertaken in the vicinity of Los Angeles to bring about the formation of sanitation districts which include incorporated and intervening rural territory with the idea of constructing trunk line sewers for the districts, carrying the sewage for as much as 40 miles to the Pacific Ocean. Four districts have been formed and one of them, the Central Metropolitan Sewer District, is about to vote bonds approximating $500,000 to construct a trunk line sewer connecting into the Hyperion outfall of the city of Los Angeles. The Bureau has not supported this project as it felt it was unnecessarily expensive upon the residents. However, in certain other sections of Los Angeles County the Bureau has been in sympathy with the movements to sewer to the ocean and has been of considerable assistance in furthering the plan.

For the convenience of engineers when on field inspections, the large scale plans of many of the sewage works have been redrawn to letter-head size.

The mapping of nuisance areas surrounding sewer farms was initiated during the period and valuable findings in this phase of sewage disposal were established. Nuisance maps for 20 of the sewer farms and treatment works have been completed, showing a range of travel of odors varying from one-quarter mile to three miles radius. Performance tests of sewage treatment plants were run at Lodi, Reedley, Kingsburg, Tulare, Fowler, Madera, Walnut Creek, Veterans' Home (Yountville), Sonoma State Home, Vacaville and Agnews State Hospital.

Complaints of nuisance and menace to health were received from the following places and the communities responsible notified to construct works or sewers to abate the nuisance: Hollister, Reedley, Kingsburg, Porterville, Tulare, Santa Rosa, California Packing Corporation at Santa Rosa, Levine Tannery and Santa Rosa Tannery at Santa Rosa, Sonoma, Chico and Dos Palos. Hollister has completed its sewage works in response to the notice and the other communities are making good progress.

After 35 years of procrastination the city of San Jose has finally been brought to the point of remedying its deplorable sewage disposal condition and a bond issue of $400,000 voted.

The following beaches were quarantined as dangerous for swimming and bathing, due to sewage pollution: Santa Monica, Ventura, Hermosa Beach, Santa Barbara and portions of the beach at Santa Cruz.

Industrial waste.

Considerably laboratory and field study was made of peach and tomato wastes at Niles and Hayward and a survey of the waste production of these crops at canneries in Selma, Atwater, Visalia, Santa Rosa, Hanford, Lodi, Hollister, Yuba City, Gridley and Centerville. The work so far accomplished indicates that peach and tomato wastes per ton of raw fruit has a flow equivalent to that of 30 persons but a strength and amount of settleable solids at least equivalent to that of 300 persons. As the ordinary cannery handles at least 50 tons pack per day the organic waste produced is equivalent to that of a 15,000 population community. A tremendous burden is therefore imposed upon communities having to take care of these wastes, or if the expense must be borne by the cannery itself it represents a heavy burden on the cannery. The nuisance produced by these cannery wastes is decidedly offensive. The only success attending their treatment has been had at Lodi where by using the entire capacity of the activated sludge plant, with sludge re-aeration, a good effluent has resulted. In this instance the cannery has agreed to stand the expense of operation, in excess of the normal expense for treating the domestic sewage.

A study of creamery wastes was made at Tulare. This waste, like cannery waste, is many times stronger in putrescible organic matter than ordinary sewage and correspondingly difficult and expensive to treat.

Swimming pools.

The scoring of swimming pools was initiated as an aid in comparing the relative sanitation of each and as a guide in issuing permits. A tentative basis of issuing permits is on a 65 per cent score or better. The weight of each element of the score in use at present is as follows: Pool, rooms and office, 20 per cent; bacterial safety of pool water, 10 per cent; clearness of pool water, 15 per cent; life saving equipment, 5 per cent; urinals, 4 per cent; toilets, 4 per cent; showers, 4 per cent; dressing rooms and halls, 10 per cent; laundry, 5 per cent; operation, 10 per cent; general impression, 10 per cent; notices, 3 per cent.

NEEDS OF THE BUREAU.

From a summary in 1923 by the Pennsylvania State Board of Health the appropriation for sanitary engineering salaries should be at least $14,000 per million population in cities and towns under 100,000 population. Larger cities are excluded from the calculation on the grounds that they can maintain their own sanitary engineering work.

California is growing strikingly to cities. The rate of increase in urban population from 1910 to 1920 was 60 per cent. Rural population increased only 20 per cent. The urban population for 1925 in cities under 100,000 will be at least 1,000,000. The engineering salaries should amount to at least $14,000 per year. At present they amount to $9,940. Solely to permit closer contact with water supplies it is asked that two sanitary engineers be added to the staff, one to be detailed to the southern and one to the northern office. It is also requested that the laboratory be restored by the addition of a well-trained sanitary analyst and a dish washer, and that the engineers and laboratory be properly equipped to function efficiently. It must be expected of the Bureau that at best no closer contact can be had with sewage disposal than in the past and that swimming-pool sanitation and garbage disposal must continue without supervision until still further enlargement in engineering personnel is provided.

REPORT OF THE BUREAU OF FOODS AND DRUGS.

July 1, 1922, to June 30, 1924.

C. H. McCHARLES, Acting Director.

The report of the Bureau of Foods and Drugs herewith submitted is the nineteenth biennial report of this bureau, covering the period July 1, 1922, to June 30, 1924.

The routine work of the bureau is set forth in the tabulated report, but there are a few of its activities which can perhaps be better expressed in words.

The California Sanitary Bakery Law was approved June 30, 1921, and has now been in operation for three years. Previous to the passage of this act it was customary for many individual retailers to handle bread from a number of bakeries. The bread bore no mark by which the identity of the baker could be made known to the consumer. As a result the consumer was unable to know when he was using bread from bake shops which were consistently violating the provisions of the Food Sanitation Act, even though such violations were published in the newspapers. Those provisions of the Sanitary Bakery Law which require all bread to be marked by means of a wrapper or sticker or otherwise in such manner that the consumer knows what shop the bread comes from have added force to the inspection work. The period of education in the enforcement of this provision is over, and at present it is rare to find bread sold in violation of this provision. There has been a marked improvement in the quality of fruit products used in bakeries. Imitation jelly has been almost completely supplanted by jelly.

Egg production in California, on account of natural agricultural conditions, shows a peak in the spring and a slump in the fall. In spite of the recent extensive development of the poultry industry, it is still necessary to place a certain amount of eggs in cold storage in the spring in order to have an adequate supply during the fall. The provisions of the Cold Storage Act require eggs to be labeled "cold stored" when they are retailed. This designation, however, seriously hinders the sale of eggs because of a strong prejudice in the minds of the consumers, consequently, a considerable portion of the cold storage eggs have been sold as fresh. The amount of policing necessary to regulate this violation of the law is far beyond the means at the disposal of the State Board of Health. The practice of substituting cold storage eggs for fresh has been facilitated by recent development in the methods of handling eggs. Improved methods of processing eggs with oil to prevent evaporation during storage, and improved methods for removing the outward oily appearance of processed eggs enable the dealer to sell cold stored eggs with little danger of the substitution being discovered by the consumer. An attempt has been made to meet this situation by means of revised regulations for the merchandising of eggs, and if the results seem to justify it revised legislation will be asked for.

The carbonated beverage industry has been suffering from a quite general misunderstanding of the labeling requirements imposed by the food laws. Numerous prosecutions under the Pure Food Act has served to educate some of the individuals but have failed to reach the industry as a whole. The food and drug inspectors visited most of the bottling plants in the state during the later months of 1924 and went over their labels in detail with them. Full instructions were given concerning individual labels. Permission was granted for the bottlers to use up existing stocks of labels within a reasonable length of time and rather careful sanitary inspections were made. If a similar inspection is made before next spring the inspectors may reasonably expect to find faulty sanitary conditions corrected and labels in use which comply with the requirements of the law.

There are many restaurants and eating places in California located along the principal highways which are not subject to local inspection, because they lie outside incorporated areas. Most of these were visited and scored on a card similar to that used by the Federal Government for eating places in the vicinities of cantonments during the war. Unsanitary conditions were noted and instructions were left for their correction. If a similar inspection is conducted somewhat later it will be reasonable to expect to find most of these conditions corrected and where these expectations are not fulfilled there should be no difficulty in obtaining assistance from local justices of the peace. Score cards of this type have been used by certain municipalities, and it has usually been customary to consider any score below 70 as indicating intolerable conditions, and unless immediate efforts are put forth to correct these conditions summary action is resorted to. The scores obtained from 265 eating places range as follows:

Score	100-95; 95-90; 90-85; 85-80; 80-75; 75-70; 70-65; 65-60
Number of restaurants--	5	25	36	49	62	36	26	17
Score	60-55; 55-50; 45-40; 25-30
Number of restaurants--	5	2	1	1

Most of the low scores were found to be due to wholly inadequate quarters or equipment, and these conditions were ordered corrected.

SUMMARY.

The work of the food and drug laboratory for the present biennial period included the analysis of 2447 samples of food and drugs. Of this number 1278 samples were collected officially under the foods and drugs acts. Of these 1278 official samples 731 were found sufficiently adulterated or mislabeled to warrant action under the food and drug laws and this number of cases were brought before the State Board of Health for a private preliminary hearing. Four hundred thirty-five cases heard by the State Board of Health were continued indefinitely for the reason that the difficulty had been corrected and 296 cases were referred to the district attorneys throughout the state for action in the courts. Of these 296 cases referred to district attorneys, 208 have been convicted by courts or juries; 19 cases were dismissed and 69 cases are still pending. The fines imposed by the courts for the biennial period amount to $5,880. Nine hundred fourteen thousand seven hundred thirty-seven pounds of decomposed or unfit food has been condemned as not fit for human food and a large amount of it has been destroyed.

REPORT OF THE BUREAU OF REGISTRATION OF NURSES.

July 1, 1922, to June 30, 1924.

ANNA C. JAMMÉ, R.N., Director.

The completion of this biennium marks the fourth since the establishment of the Bureau in 1913. Each period has seen certain changes directed toward constructive work in the education and training of nurses, and in the examination for the certificate as registered nurse. The detail of this report from July, 1922, to July, 1924, will show how this has been accomplished. In each step of the work the Bureau has received the sincere cooperation of the schools through the superintendent of nurses and her staff, also from the organizations of nurses in the state, i. e. the State and District associations, The State League of Nursing Education and The State Public Health Nurses' Association. These organizations, representing 2923 registered nurses, have upheld the State Board of Health and the Bureau in legislation and in the endeavor to raise the standard of nursing education in California.

Amendments to the act.

In 1921, the legislature made certain amendments, some of which became effective immediately and are mentioned in the last biennial report. The most important change did not become effective until July 1, 1923, that of reducing the minimum course from three years to two years and four months, and providing for additional courses beyond the minimum period. The schools had two years in which to prepare for this, and were ready to organize their course on this basis by July 1, 1923.

In September, 1922, the State Board of Health called a conference of superintendents of schools of nursing, hospital administrators, directors of public health courses, physicians, educators and others interested in the education and training of nurses. This conference brought together fully two hundred people and the outgrowth was the appointment of a committee to study the curriculum, requirements for entrance to schools of nursing and advanced courses. After a most careful study and investigation, occupying a period of six months, the committee made the following recommendations to the State Board of Health, which were approved by the Board and by it recommended to the schools:

1. That accredited schools of nursing may set their own standards of educational entrance requirements, provided they meet the minimum requirements of the State Board of Health, namely, one year of high school attendance or a satisfactory educational equivalent.

2. It is advised that schools maintaining educational requirements higher than the minimum shall admit only students who conform to their educational requirements.

3. The students shall be given six weeks theoretical and practical instruction in communicable diseases which may be included in the basic course.

4. That practical experience in tuberculosis nursing outside the parent school should not be included in the basic course.

5. That students assigned to isolation departments shall be immunized as in smallpox, typhoid fever, diphtheria.

6. That hospitals employ sufficient personnel to perform noneducational duties of the hospital in order that students shall have time to pursue their studies.

7. The standard curriculum issued by the National League of Nursing Education is approved as a guide for instruction in all subjects and it is recommended that this curriculum be used.

Schools of nursing.

On July 1, 1924, there were on the accredited list sixty-two schools with a total attendance of two thousand, three hundred and sixty-three students (2363), an increase of two hundred and eighteen (218) over July 1, 1922. During this biennial period one new school has been established in connection with the San Jose hospital, and the schools connected with the following six hospitals have been closed: Columbia, San Jose; Hahnemann, San Francisco; Redlands; San Antonio, Upland; Sequoia, Eureka; White, Sacramento.

The curriculum of the basic course is followed in all schools and represents the minimum amount of instruction below which a school can not go and remain accredited. This minimum, however, is exceeded in many schools and both theory and practice amplified. The most important advance for the schools has been the four months preparatory period, entering students in groups three times a year and commencing instruction immediately on entrance. This is now a requirement in which every accredited school complies.

Advanced courses.

For additional work beyond the basic course, the law makes a requirement whereby a school having sufficient facilities may give additional instruction to a point that is not limited by the law, but, which must be of special character and approved by the board. In the one year since this has been effective, we find students receiving special instruction and practical experience in communicable diseases, tuberculosis, mental diseases, advanced operating room work, departmental administration, out-patient department, and, for specially prepared students, general public health nursing. These courses are developing not too rapidly, but soundly and surely, and in another year there should be advanced courses available for an increased number of students in order that during a period of three years students may receive their basic training and training in a specialty they contemplate practicing.

Schools approved on a basis of three years' instruction.

The following schools have been approved by the Board as having facilities for carrying out a three-year program, namely the basic twenty-eight months and eight months additional advanced work for each student in these schools:

University of California	Saint Helena Sanitarium
Stanford University	Glendale Sanitarium
Pasadena Hospital	White Memorial Hospital
Loma Linda Hospital

In August, 1922, the Mare Island Naval Training School for Nurses was placed on the accredited list, the basis of accrediting being fulfillment of the requirements of the State Board of Health for a civil school and the completion of a four-year enlistment in the Navy, this to include nursing at the naval station and on board ship. This is the first naval school for nurses accredited in the United States and gives the opportunity to the enlisted sailors to obtain the R. N. certificate.

Housing of students.

Living conditions, as housing, food, recreation have progressed greatly in the last two years, and with only two exceptions we find students in comfortable, even luxurious, dormitories. Beautiful residences have been built and furnished either by the hospital or by private endowment and here the students may live in the comfort and cultural atmosphere these residences afford during their period of training. This has had direct influence on the health of the students, their interest in their studies and has also encouraged more young women of higher education to enter the schools.

Inspection of schools.

From July 1, 1922, to July 1, 1923, there were two inspectors of schools of nursing, one located in the southern part of the state with headquarters in Los Angeles, the other in the northern part with headquarters in San Francisco. During this year the schools were carefully inspected and assisted in their instruction by the inspectors. Every school was inspected and in many cases several visits were made outside of the formal inspection.

Certification of applicants for schools of nursing.

The law requires that the applicant for registration shall be 21 years of age. The Board requires that the applicant entering a school shall be at least eighteen years of age. The Board also requires that the applicant shall have had one year of high school, or a satisfactory educational equivalent. This makes it necessary that all applicants should be certified before entrance in order to avoid disqualification at the end of the course and when she comes up for the state examination. This work has been maintained during the biennial and all students now in the school have received their qualifying certificate.

Examinations.

Six examinations have been held during the biennial period; one thousand six hundred and fourteen applicants have passed the examinations and obtained their certificate as registered nurse.

Registered by examination.

June	195 applicants
1923—February	165 applicants

Registration without examination.

Nurses registered in other states or foreign countries may be registered in California without examination provided they meet the requirements for certification as provided by the California act. This registration has been very heavy, especially in the past year, averaging from sixty to a hundred every month. In August, 1923, three hundred and twenty-seven (327) applicants were passed by the State Board of Health. This large number was due to a rumor which gained prevalence throughout the United States that registration without examination would be discontinued on July 1, 1923. At this time a large number of applications, fully 250, were sent back to the applicants as the office was unable to handle them.

1923—January 1, to January 1, 1924.....	1,078 applicants

Renewal of certificate.

The law requires that the certificate shall be renewed each year. In 1922, and 1923, a list of the registered nurses of the state was published, the expense of which was defrayed by the renewal fee of $1. Up to July 1, 1924, two thousand five hundred and eighty-seven nurses renewed their certificate. This list of registered nurses could not be published, as there were no funds available for this purpose.

REPORT OF BUREAU OF CHILD HYGIENE.

July 1, 1922, to June 30, 1924.

ELLEN S. STADTMULLER, M.D., Director.

Due to the subsidy received from the federal government during this biennium it has been possible to expand our activities in promoting maternal and infant hygiene in the state, especially during the last eighteen months. The first half-year saw little done due to change of personnel in the Bureau. The work accomplished by the Bureau may well be divided into three portions—first, office expansion and compilation of statistics; second, work of the state staff; and third, work of maternity and infancy nurses placed in the counties.

Office activities.

The first undertaking in the office activities was a compilation of the register of public health nurses and of health centers in California, which was made by issuing questionnaires to the health officers and all others interested in the welfare of children. Through this questionnaire we ascertained that there were approximately 500 public health nurses in the state at that time and 120 health centers. In these centers, mothers were instructed upon the proper hygiene for their children after complete medical examination had been made. On the other hand, very little work was done for the expectant mother in educating her to preserve her own health. We have instituted a system of postcard returns from these health centers through which, eventually, we will be able to show the amount of work done in California to preserve the health of little children. The returns from these postcards are not yet complete, but each month shows the addition of a few more names to those who report regularly.

Many sets of circular letters have been issued fostering activity in this field, the largest amount of work being devoted to two main campaigns—the organization of a campaign for the physical examination of children who enter school this coming fall, during the months of April and May, and the issuance of prenatal letters.

The preschool campaign was initiated by this office after consultation with those most closely in touch with this particular field throughout the state. Organization work was done in twenty cooperative counties by workers from our office and printed material, publicity, record forms, etc., were printed and distributed by our office. The figures from this campaign have not yet been completely compiled but, conservatively, 4000 children were examined of the ages from five to seven years. The figures from these physical examinations are being analyzed and compiled so that we will have a serviceable group of statistics to show for this work.

The prenatal letters were the result of compilation from those issued by other states, but an effort was made to have the language in these letters extremely simple so that any mother who could read English would grasp their meaning. After their medical soundness was vouched for by submitting them to those expert in this field, they were printed and distributed first to the physicians of the state offering them for distribution, either in the doctor's own office or through a mailing list from the office of the Bureau. In this way, 8133 sets of letters have been put into circulation between the first of May and the first of July.

Four new leaflets have been prepared—"Advice for Expectant Mothers," "Dental Care for Expectant Mothers," "Breast Feeding," and "Dental Care for Children from Birth to Six Years." These, together with other literature previously prepared and federal bulletins have been distributed to the number of 203,236. Beside this, numerous record forms, both for our own and for the use of our county nurses, have been printed and distributed.

State staff.

The work of the state staff has grouped itself under three main headings. The director and nurses have, during the course of the past biennium, given 263 talks before groups of all kinds varying from the general public to selected professional groups, such as county medical societies and public health nursing institutes. At a number of these the films which have been added recently to our equipment have been shown. Exhibits have been prepared with the idea of instruction in maternal and infant hygiene, which have been demonstrated by the state staff, as well as being loaned to interested health workers in various parts of the state.

A staff consisting of the director, public health nurse and dental hygienist have held 64 children's health conferences for the medical examination of children under six years, 2854 of whom have been examined during this biennium. Eighty-nine conferences for dental care alone have been held at which 5086 children were examined. A list of the places in which this work has been done is appended, the effort being to reach the parts of the state never before visited by our Bureau and also to leave, as the result of our work, some permanent work going on in the community.

One public health nurse has devoted her time to making a survey of the midwives of the state, fifty counties being reached by direct personal visit and eight by letter, during the course of which 369 midwives were interviewed. Of this number, 111 were licensed midwives; of the remainder, one-half of the type were of the kind which should be eliminated entirely, the second half could be improved by a simple course in the hygiene of pregnancy. After making the inspection visit each midwife was supplied with literature on maternal and infant hygiene from this office, as well as prophylactic eye drops which were obtained from the hygienic laboratory.

County nurses.

A large part of the money derived from the federal subsidy was used to pay the salary of nurses to do county work. During part of this year we paid the full salary in counties where a return in the form of transportation was made by the county. After the first year's work we found that better progress could be made by increasing the field of the nurses' activities to cover the whole phase of public health nursing and consequently our funds were used to pay only a portion of the salary, the rest being made up locally so that the nurse could do a complete piece of public health nursing.

It was our original hope to cover twelve counties each year so that in the five years in which we expect to receive the federal subsidy all of the counties of California could be covered. This plan has been somewhat curtailed, but during this biennium five nurses have been on full-time and three on part-time pay for the whole period. Appended is a list of the counties where these nurses have been, together with the amount of time spent in each county.

One of our nurses was employed in supervising the work for maternity and infancy in the San Joaquin Local Health District, and in summarizing the work done by our nurses the figures of those over whom she had supervision have been incorporated, but can easily be determined by reading the following table:

SURVEY OF MIDWIVES IN CALIFORNIA.

FRED A. M. WHYTE, R.N., Public Health Nurse.

This survey was started in January, 1923, and was completed in January, 1924. Fifty counties were covered by visits and the midwives interviewed personally. They were located through interviews with local physicians, health officers, public health nurses, recorders and other city officials and by the signatures that appeared on birth certificates, necessitating the investigation of all birth certificates. Eight counties were canvassed by correspondence. Letters were sent to all the local physicians of these counties asking for information concerning midwives, for the reason that none were registered in these counties. Seven of the eight counties were in the extreme eastern part of the state, sparsely populated, expensive and hard to reach. Literature, both federal and state, pertaining to prenatal, post-natal and child care, and silver-nitrate (1 per cent) was distributed to all midwives and county and city public health nurses. The nurses were instructed in what is required of the midwives and all midwives owning kits submitted them for examination.

In describing the different kinds of midwives found, I divided the group into five distinct classes:

- 1st—The graduate, unlicensed midwife.
- 2nd—The licensed midwife.
- 3rd—The practical, trained, unlicensed midwife.
- 4th—The self-named midwife (untrained and undesirable).
- 5th—The graduate nurse who acts as midwife in emergency.

The rules and regulations for the licensed midwife in California, issued by the State Board of Medical Examiners, under the Medical Practice Act, read as follows: "An applicant for a certificate to practice midwifery in California must show that she has attended one year's course in a hospital recognized as reputable by the Board, and must have had a course of instruction in anatomy (75 hours), physiology (75 hours), obstetrics (165 hours) and sanitation and hygiene (100 hours), making a total of 415 hours of actual experience. In addition to this, her basic educational qualifications must be one year of high school, or its equivalent, that she be of good moral character and is in good health."

This explains the grouping of midwives in the above-named classes, as many have had training many years ago in their native schools, can practically and technically care for their patients well, yet when it comes to taking a written examination (which is the only one given in California) they fail, as some have no knowledge of the English language, and the fee for an interpreter is $75 in addition to the $25 for the license. Many complain that these charges are too high, as they say they receive such small fees for their confinements. This is especially true among the Italians, who take cases for as little as $5. The highest rate is $25 for the care of mother and babe for no less than one week, some go ten to twelve days, and in many instances they get no pay, yet never refuse to go.

I will give you the figures for the different types of midwives, according to groups. Not all of the 500 or more that I interviewed were midwives, some were grandmothers, mothers, aunts or friendly neighbors. In some cases the husbands cared for their wives. This I found mostly among the Japanese, where I was told that was part of their army training, to learn first-aid helps in obstetrics. In one of these the accoucher was a friend of the patient's husband, the husband not having had a military training. Another case I visited where a man was caring for all of his friends' wives in the small town in which he resided. He claimed to have been an orderly in a hospital and stated he had been called in emergency to help in a great many capacities. Three hundred and sixty-six women I interviewed were actually doing midwife work. Fifty-two of these are graduate unlicensed midwives, all having diplomas from their respective schools of training. I found one hundred and eleven who are licensed, mostly all graduates, a few who have had years of practical training and became licensed under the waiver in 1918. Eighty-six are good practical midwives who have had their training under the supervision of a reputable physician or in a hospital or institution, and did not finish the required term of training, and some were instructed by other midwives. This occurs mostly among the foreign-born midwives.

Ninety per cent of the midwives in California are foreign-born and 70 per cent of these are Japanese. Of the 111 licensed midwives, 80 per cent are Japanese women. These I found had a much better technique and more thorough training than those of any other nationality that I interviewed. A great many of them have had training as professional nurses in addition to their midwife training. They have the most practical and unique kit of any I examined. They are made of nicked copper, all about 15 inches long, 8 inches wide and 8 inches high and are very compact. Every container is within another container and each container has its own use, one as a general sterilizer, another as an instrument sterilizer and the third a douche can. They carry only what is allowed by the law in Japan, which is the same as our law and is as follows:

1 nail brush (wooden or bone).	Agate or glass douche reservoir.
Nail cleaner.	2 rectal nozzles, large and small.
Jar of green soap or soft castile.	1 rubber catheter.
Rubber gloves.	Narrow tape or soft twine for tying cord.
Tube sterile vasoline.	Blunt scissors for cutting cord.
Clinical thermometer.	Boric acid powder.
Either lysol, carbolic acid or bichloride of mercury tablets.	1 per cent silver-nitrate solution.
Medicine dropper.	Absorbent cotton.

No other instruments are to be used, owned or possessed by a midwife.

The nationalities of the midwives were many—American, English, German, French, Italian, Portuguese, Jewish, Finnish, Slavonian, Russian, Armenian, Greek, Swedish, Danish and Japanese, and it was with great difficulties that I made them understand my mission. Some thought I was a book agent or a canvasser of some sort, but with the assistance of a neighbor or a school child I always got my message over. Whenever I could get in touch with the nurse of the district, in whom they all have great confidence, I always got the information I wished and in many cases would be sent to their friend who did the same “kind of work.” I have always left them with a kindly spirit and feel that I imparted to them a little more knowledge in sanitation and hygiene and their responsibility to their patients. Los Angeles has the largest number of licensed midwives; San Francisco, second; Alameda, third; Sacramento, fourth; San Joaquin, fifth and Fresno, sixth. The rest are scattered over territory around the numerous fruit districts.

It was not difficult to find the licensed midwives, as the directory of the State Medical Board has all the addresses of these in its annual roster, but I had to use a different method in finding the other groups, visits to the courthouse to search all birth records, visits to maternity and health centers for names of the accouchers. Interviewing the local physicians and public health nurses helped me in locating these. I found that a great many county clerks and local officers had issued city licenses to some of these women permitting them to practice and they, in ignorance of the state law, think it is all that is required of them. I corrected this belief and referred them to the State Board of Medical Examiners for state license. This is quite true of San Francisco, where I found nineteen good graduate midwives practicing under this impression.

The practical well-trained midwives constitute a most interesting and intelligent group. Some have had an unfinished hospital training, while others have had years of practical experience under the personal supervision of one or more physicians. They all understand the stage of labor, prenatal and after-care of mother and baby; they are well recommended by the local doctors and they will surprise you in their explanation of how skilfully they handle their cases. I recall a doctor in one of our northern counties saying “If you eliminate these women you take away my staff and the best mothers of my county, for I have trained these women so they can assist me in emergency multipara cases in their vicinity when I am too busy to be able to be there personally. This county is large and physicians are scarce. I have no assistant and you can readily see what these women mean in the rural communities. They know when to call me and so far I have had no complaints." All these women are very anxious to become licensed and have asked me where they could get the required training. Many have attended obstetrical cases alone, but since learning that the law prevents them doing it legally, they have refused to go as midwife and go only as practical nurse. This is a great handicap to them on account of the reason already stated, that the physician can not always be present and beside, (because of economic condition that some have midwives), they find themselves without employment. This type of midwife is found mostly in the rural communities where there are no hospitals that will take obstetrical cases at reduced rates. Wherever there are these hospitals I find no midwives, as the doctors there encourage hospital confinements at inviting prices. A great many of these women take cases as low as $5 for the confinement and in a great many cases get no pay at all and feel it is their duty to help anyone in distress. They are eager for more knowledge and all literature pertaining to their work.

The self-named midwife is very undesirable. This is a very entertaining type and if you will listen, they'll keep you all day reciting their many wonderful cases. They are mostly the woman who claims she knows all about confinement work, is the gossip of the neighborhood, very skeptical and full of tales about traditional superstition and lunar signs. She always believes Providence will protect her. In finding these women I had great difficulty, as they were the ones who refuse any information if they think you are an inspector. I soon learned this and used the method of always looking for a nurse who could care for a friend. This brought the desired result and we always parted friends. I found these women doing all sorts of illegal work, such as making hypodermic injections, inter-uterine douches and abortions. These gross infractions of the law were reported to the proper authorities. They charge from $20 to $35 per week and some only go three or four days. Most of them are illiterate, very dirty and the few clean ones that I did find were undesirable characters, who do illegal work. Most are clever enough never to sign a birth certificate and always have a parent's signature to them. Some never send in the birth reports. One Russian woman confined 16 babies in 1923 and not one was recorded. Another kept a book registering 36 births but failed to send them to the recorder. She did not realize her mistake. These women have no knowledge of sanitation or hygiene. They all revel in exaggeration of how many babies they have brought into the world. I remember one woman in particular who was 72 years old, very, very dirty, and she lived in a hovel in one of the small towns. Her two rooms were littered with dirty draperies and faded tissue paper flowers and "accumulated antiques" as she termed them. Every chair, except the one offered me, was heaped with dusty newspapers and she looked so grimy that she might have been cleaning out a coal bin, which she didn't possess. A few snags of teeth still held in her upper jaw. Altogether she reminded me of the memory of the old hag that I saw in Macbeth when I was a child. Her story was that she first did midwife work when her second baby was born. She lived in the mountains far back in Calaveras county and her husband was away from home. She had no neighbors so she had to take care of herself. Everything went well and when a new neighbor moved near her and needed attention she volunteered to help her. This also proved a success, so she became courageous and has been practicing ever since. She claims that she has delivered 2000 babies. When I asked her how many mothers she confined she thought for a minute and said: "Oh, about 138." I am still trying to figure how many babies were delivered at each birth. She also claims she never had an infection in her work and never lost a mother. Looking at her, I thought how fortunate the ones were who escaped her.

In the last group, I put the public health nurse who acts in emergency. She is either the county or local nurse or one who has left the field of active service but who still finds it her duty to be of help to her community. She is always a graduate nurse and assists where no doctor or hospital is available. One, I remember, lives many miles away from a city, is married to the superintendent of the mine there and is never too busy to attend to the wives of the employees at any time of night or day. The county physician calls her "his angel of mercy," which she truly is. Her services are all gratis and many are the blessings bestowed upon her by her people.

This will give you a descriptive outline of the midwives in California as I found them. In conclusion, I would like to make a few suggestions which I feel would benefit these women greatly, as you can see from this narrative there is a great need for improving education in midwifery. The 102 undesirables were told of the dangers they were undertaking and were advised to discontinue their work, yet some will still continue to defy the law. We hope, with the assistance of the local health officers and the public health nurses, to keep track of these and have them reported to the proper authorities. But what can we do for the 86 good reliable, practical women who are so very anxious to become licensed and who would be a credit to the work? Here is one suggestion, that through the joint efforts of the State Board of Health and the State Medical Examiners, a program could be arranged for a course of training given by the Bureau of Child Hygiene, which would give them a better technical training as to the methods for a safe confinement and the after-care of the mother and babe. Following this course, an additional practical demonstration should be required, as many of these women have a good knowledge of the actual work and are very clean, but when they try to answer the questions that are given them by the State Board of Medical Examiners they fail, due to their extreme nervousness and their lack of knowing the English language. This complaint has come to me direct and I saw some of these women demonstrate and can recommend them. This course might be given through correspondence or by the public health nurse of the county, and could be conducted in the same way as the Little Mother's classes are. The nurse could use the health center for class work or the homes of the different midwives could be used in succession. This would acquaint the nurse with the midwife more intimately and vice versa. The final examination could be held once a year and a supervisor of the state, specializing in midwifery, attend and assist the local nurse.

In conclusion, let me tell the nurse how she can assist the Bureau of Child Hygiene to find and educate the midwife—by locating and reporting all prenatal cases—by finding out whether said case will be confined by a doctor or midwife; if a midwife, by locating her and interviewing her, reporting the type that she may be, to find out whether she is a graduate or not and to inform her of the state laws relative to drops in the eyes and reporting births; letting the midwife know where and how she can obtain the silver-nitrate for the babies' eyes and by distributing all our literature pertaining to prenatal, after-care and infant feeding. Doing all this will help to establish a cooperation that will make a better and more intelligent class of midwives to care for patients who insist on having a midwife in preference to a doctor. These women especially need the best kind of prenatal, confinement and post-partum care.

REPORT OF THE BUREAU OF VITAL STATISTICS.

L. E. ROSS, Director.

Analysis of the vital statistics of California for the last two years shows that—

First, the birth rates were the highest ever recorded in this state.

Second, the death rates have been the highest ever recorded except for the influenza year 1918.

Third, the infant mortality rates were on the increase, probably reflecting a general reaction from the unusually low rate of 1921, but not reaching the high rates of previous years.

Fourth, a heavy increase in marriages during 1923, with the rates for the biennium setting a new high record.

BIRTHS.

During 1922, the crude birth rate fell off slightly, 19.8 for 1922, as compared with 20.2 for the previous year. Although there was an increase of 1.2 per cent in the number of births registered, the population, upon which the birth rate is based, was assumed to have increased 3.0 per cent, thus resulting in a lower calculated rate. California, in common with the other Pacific coast states, has a low birth rate, and as progress toward complete registration of all births is made, the natural fluctuations in this vital function are more clearly reflected in the rates. There may also have been a decrease in the rate at which the population was assumed to have increased; and since the crude rate is merely the births divided by the population, this factor may have accounted for some of the decrease. During 1923, however, the rate rose to the new high mark of 21.1. During this year some testing of birth registration was done by the Bureau, the results indicating that about 93 per cent of all births were actually registered. As the registrations totaled 80,237, there were probably some 86,300 babies born alive during the year, giving a rate of 22.7 as representing the actual reproductive function of the population. As mentioned, this is a low birth rate and is characteristic of the Pacific slope.

In order to determine other features of the low birth rates in this state and to discover, if possible, the causes which underlie them, an examination was made of available data bearing upon this important subject. It was found that among married women, child-bearing is more universal in California than in that portion of the nation represented in the birth registration area of the United States, but that California women have smaller families. That is to say, there is a smaller proportion of childless marriages in this state, but the average issue per mother is less than in the registration area as a whole, and the average interval between successive births is greater. The figures indicate that in the registration area 10.6 per cent of the married women never have children, whereas in California only 6.5 per cent remain childless. On the other hand, among those women who do have children the average issue is 330 per hundred mothers in the registration area and only 266 in California. Hence, while child-bearing is more general among the women of this state, the early termination of this function on the part of California women, together with the greater intervals between successive births, results in a low birth rate.

The birth rate is a function of two principal factors, namely, good free land and educational standards. As the one disappears and the other is established upon higher planes, the birth rate goes down. This has been the history of birth rates throughout the development of this country. In any area where the free land is all gone and a high birth rate persists, it usually indicates low educational standards and a reduced degree of average intelligence. In California, not only is the free land all gone but detailed population studies indicate a high general average of intelligence, coupled with advanced educational standards. Only 3.3 per cent of the population aged 10 years or over is illiterate in California, whereas in the areas having the higher birth rates the proportion runs close to 13.0 per cent. Under these conditions a more general appreciation of the economic stress of raising a family is to be expected. There was a time when raising a large family simply necessitated cultivating more land, which was to be had for the taking, and children were taken from school and put to work upon it. If there were no good free land locally, a family could "go west." But these conditions no longer exist. We can go west no further and are now turned back upon ourselves. In fact we are beginning to go east. About 150,000 native Californians are living in eastern states and only 37 per cent of our population is native to this state. All our good land is taken and prices are high. A child must now be educated under higher standards, which means an increasing economic burden for twenty years or more, and the majority of family incomes are limited to the earning capacity of the father.

We therefore find that the birth rate, and incidentally the practice of contraceptive methods or birth control, are dependent upon conditions which lie at the foundation of our economic development, and the low birth rates of California are but a reflection of these factors.

INFANT MORTALITY.

During 1921, infant mortality was unusually low in nearly every part of the country, and the California rate, 66.3, was the lowest ever recorded here. The rates increased during the past two years, being 71.1 in 1922 and 72.9 in 1923, reflecting the general trend of rates throughout the country. In California a heavy increase occurred in infant deaths from diarrhea and enteritis, the 1923 figure, 1133, being exceptionally high. Other increases occurred in diphtheria, influenza, dysentery, tuberculosis, venereal diseases, pneumonia and affections peculiar to early infancy. During the present biennium there were 11,056 infant deaths as compared with 9847 during the previous two years, an increase of 12.3 per cent. The births, upon which the infant mortality rate is based, increased from 139,636 to 153,558 or 10.0 per cent.

Imperial county continued to lead the state with the highest infant mortality rates, with Kings, Riverside, San Bernardino and Ventura following closely with rates far in excess of those for the state as a whole. In testing birth registration it has been found that the Mexican population contributes a substantial portion of our infant mortality, while birth registration in this group is the poorest of any. When infant mortality rates for counties are computed the effect of this condition is more clearly seen, those counties having large Mexican populations also having high infant mortality rates.

DEATHS.

During the last two years the crude death rates for California have been unusually high, being produced mainly by continued increases in the mortality from diseases of the circulatory system, diseases of the nervous system, cancer and violence. Minor increases occurred in the mortality from measles, diphtheria, venereal diseases, nephritis, digestive diseases, senility and suicide. The tuberculosis mortality increased during 1922, but the rate of 1923, 150.4 per 100,000 population, was the lowest yet recorded in this state. Other slight decreases occurred in typhoid fever, malaria, smallpox, influenza and poliomyelitis. Small fluctuations were observed in other causes of deaths; but for the most part the mortality classifications in which the greatest number of deaths occur, showed marked increases, thus resulting in the higher general rates.

It is during times of increased mortality that attention is directed more particularly to this subject. In the past two years 106,384 people died in California. There were no unusual epidemics; no one cause produced the higher death rates as was the case in 1918. There was a general increase all along the line, particularly during 1923. The principal objective—perhaps the only one—of public health activities is to prolong life through the reduction of preventable mortality. These activities are a function of government, for it has long been recognized that the public health is one of the primary concerns of government. This is based upon the simple fact that health means wealth; that a healthy population produces wealth in excess of consumption, and a wealthy population makes a strong nation. Those who are engaged in public health activities are therefore carrying out one of the most important government functions and they are directly interested in the dead, for every death that could have been prevented represents failure, directly in public health, indirectly in government. Since the ultimate foundation of public health work is the fact that a dead person can produce no more wealth and its objective is to keep that person alive and healthy for wealth-producing purposes, and since saving lives costs money, it is well to inquire into the money value of human lives in order to determine what degree of profit may be realized by society as a result of these activities. There is little sentiment attached to the matter. The prevention of sorrow and suffering enters scarcely at all into the deliberations of the state when considering the appropriation of funds for life-saving through public health activities. It is only by matching dollar for dollar that a basis for correctly evaluating this work can be found, and the sooner life saving is placed upon a financial basis the sooner will the work be stimulated to the proper degree. For centuries society has sustained stupendous financial losses through preventable mortality and apparently this fact alone accounts for our present relative indifference in the matter.

For the purpose of determining the approximate losses sustained by reason of preventable mortality in California, the writer made a study during 1923, the calculations representing conditions existing in California during the previous year. The study was based upon four factors: First, definition and calculation of the ratio of preventability for each cause of death; second, application of the laws of mortality to the lives saved under the hypothetical conditions thus established; third, the production of wealth by the average person in the population and fourth, the consumption of wealth by such persons. The ratios of preventability were calculated from the findings of Prof. Irving Fisher in 1907, embodied in the Report of the National Conservation Commission, appointed by President Roosevelt. The results of Fisher's investigation were based upon the following definition:

A ratio of preventability is that fraction of all deaths which would be prevented if knowledge now existing among well-informed men in the medical profession were actually applied in a reasonable way and to a reasonable extent.

The laws of mortality used were those indicated by the life table for California constructed by the writer upon the mortality experience of 1920. Data regarding earnings were gathered from a number of official sources, particularly the reports of state and federal bureaus of labor statistics and from the U. S. Census reports. Data on maintenance costs were taken from various published and unpublished material, particularly figures compiled by Professor Jaffa of the University of California, minimum family budgets by Florence Nesbit of Chicago, work of Wm. F. Ogburn of the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics and cost of living figures published by the U. S. Commissioner of Labor and the California State Civil Service Commission.

Omitting for the present the details of the actuarial work involved, these data were brought together and from them were calculated the net prospective future earnings in excess of maintenance of persons at each age, and the results were then discounted at 4 per cent interest compounded annually. The final result was the net present worth of lives at each age. Table "A" gives figures taken from the complete list.

Table A—Net present worth of lives, California, 1922.

Age	Present value of net prospective future earnings
0	$254 00
10	1,742 00
20	4,621 00
26	5,023 00
40	3,759 00
50	2,085 00
60	minus 60 00
75	minus 1,179 00

These values are much less than popular belief would lead one to expect; but the results have been checked in such a way as to lend a considerable degree of authenticity to the figures, although no claim is made that they are exact. They represent the approximate loss to society occasioned by removing a person of specified age from the population. They do not include doctor bills, expense of illness, loss of working time, in fact, nothing preceding death, nor do they refer to any particular group in the population. They represent the future loss, discounted to the present time, due to cutting off the further production of wealth. The maximum future value is found at age 26 years; at age 60 the future value is zero, which means that if we were to take all the people in the population aged 60 years and maintain them, charging them 4 per cent interest on what they cost us, take all they earn and pay them 4 per cent on that, when the last one was dead in accordance with the laws of mortality as they now exist in this state, the account would be about even. If the same were done with new-born babes, there would be a profit of $254 on each; for the group aged 75 years the loss would be $1,179 each, etc.

When one of these lives is lost there is a loss or gain to society, depending upon the age of the decedent. Under 60 there is a loss; over 60 a gain. When the age at death from the various causes is calculated and the ratios of preventability are applied in connection with the money value of the lives, the present value of the loss, reduced to a capitalized basis, is the result. Table "B" gives the results of these calculations. Notwithstanding the fact that at every point in the investigation minimums have been taken; that no life has been hypothetically saved more than once in its duration; and the further fact that no allowance whatever has been made for advancement of medical science during the last fifteen years, in order that any error might rest upon the side of conservatism, there is an annual loss of over forty-one million dollars through preventable mortality in California. If, at a cost of forty-one million dollars per year public health activities were extended until the conditions indicated in the foregoing definition were attained, with the minimum results as estimated by the foremost sanitarians of this country, the state would be making a sound 4 per cent investment on the basis of these calculations.

MARRIAGES.

During the past two years 205,334 people were married in California, the marriage rate for 1923 being the highest ever recorded in this state. It has not been possible to separately study the returns of this biennium, but during the early part of 1923 an analysis was made of the combined returns of 1920, 1921 and 1922. Extracts from the detailed investigation are given herewith. All figures given are averages for the three years mentioned.

Marital condition.

Table "C" gives the marriage rates for persons aged 15 years or over and eligible to marry.

TABLE C—Annual marriage rates, sex by marital condition, California.

Sex	Total	Single	Widowed	Divorced
Male	72.2	65.3	67.7	257.7
Female	117.3	112.8	33.3	284.8

The feature of these rates is the high rates for divorcees. They seem to confirm the recent statement of a superior court judge who, after having heard several thousand divorce cases, said that the average person seeking a divorce has another marriage in view. Perhaps a more vivid way of expressing the marriage rates is in the form of odds against marriage within one year. Table "D" gives this information.

Table D—Odds against marriage within one year, sex by marital condition, California.

Sex	Total	Single	Widowed	Divorced
Male	12.9 to 1	14.3 to 1	13.8 to 1	2.9 to 1
Female	7.5 to 1	8.2 to 1	29.0 to 1	2.5 to 1

This table brings out more clearly the long odds against widows and the short odds against divorcees. According to these figures, it takes 29 years to give a widow a 50-50 chance to remarry, while the odds are even that a divorcee will remarry within 2½ years.

The influence of marital condition upon selection is shown in more detail in Table "E" giving per cent distribution of all marriages. Reading these figures horizontally gives the per cent of all grooms marrying single, widowed and divorced brides; reading vertically give the same for brides marrying single, widowed and divorced grooms.

TABLE E—Per cent of marriages by marital condition.

Grooms	Single	Brides Widowed	Divorced
Single	63.76	5.74	8.08
Widowed	3.96	4.00	2.19
Divorced	5.38	2.40	4.53

It is observed that of all marriages 63.74 per cent were between single persons, 4 per cent between widowed and 4.53 per cent between divorced. Among single grooms, divorcees are preferred to widows; among widowers, women of similar marital condition hold first place with single girls preferred to divorcees. Divorced men prefer single girls first, divorcees next and widows last. Among the women, spinsters show the same preferences as single men, divorced men holding higher place than widowers; but widows, while preferring single men above all, marry widowers more frequently than divorced men. Divorced women show the same preferences as divorced men; single men first, divorcees second and widowers last.

It is evident that the previous marital experience of persons in the population has a considerable influence upon the marriage rate; and it is also apparent that the rapidly increasing number of divorces does not in any sense retard the marriage rate, whatever other evil effects it may have. During the last two years 37,216 persons were divorced in California according to data gathered by the U. S. Bureau of the Census. Our records show that approximately 15,000 divorced persons remarry in this state each year.

Nativity.

Table "F" gives the marriage rates for the population eligible to marry, by sex and nativity of contracting parties.

Table F—Marriage rates, sex by nativity, California.

Sex	Total	Single	Widowed	Divorced
Male	72.2	50.4	92.5	71.8
Female	117.3	99.8	144.2	97.4

The highest rate is for women born in other states of this country, and the lowest is for native sons of California. The odds against marriage for the various nativities are stated in Table "G."

Table G—Odds against marriage within one year, sex by nativity, California.

Sex	Total	Born in California	Born in other United States	Foreign born
Male	12.9 to 1	18.8 to 1	9.8 to 1	12.9 to 1
Female	7.5 to 1	9.0 to 1	5.9 to 1	9.3 to 1

These figures indicate that the probabilities of marriage are much greater for women than for men in all nativity groups. It is twice as great for native daughters as for native sons.

Table "H" gives the per cent of total marriages falling within each nativity classification, for grooms and brides jointly. Reading the figures horizontally gives the relative selection by grooms; reading vertically gives the same for brides.

Table H—Per cent of marriages by nativity, California.

Grooms	California	Brides, other United States	Foreign
California	14.36	9.75	1.84
Other United States	13.24	34.93	3.91
Foreign born	4.06	5.31	12.59

The tendency toward selection of mates with similar nativity is clearly seen in these figures. The largest percentages occur in the groups for Californian with Californian, Other United States with Other United States and Foreign with Foreign.

One of the principal items of interest in connection with this phase of the marriage returns, is the degree to which the natives and foreign-born are intermarrying. While the operation of the American "melting pot" is not measured by intermarriage alone it can be taken as one of the positive indications of Americanization. In Table "J" the marriage rates, between native and foreign-born, eligible to marry, are given.

Table J—Population and marriage rates, natives to foreign-born, California.

Nativity and sex	Native population	Married, foreign born	Rate per 1000 pop.
Males, California	242,186	866	3.6
Males, other United States	264,635	1,839	6.9
Females, California	149,092	1,910	12.8
Females, other United States	162,914	2,496	15.3

In so far as intermarriage is concerned in Americanization of the foreign-born in our population, it seems that the melting pot is being operated by the women. Native sons of California are doing the least and women born in other United States are doing most, according to the above figures.
